Development of Mount Angel, Four Times Named, Closely Related to Growth of Monastery and Religion

By A. K. LULAY

In going back in the early history of Mt. Angel, we find the town has been known under a variety of names. Benjamin Cleaver, on whose donation land claim the town is situated, called the settlement "Roy," but Mr. Settlemeier, whose claim adjoined the Cleaver tract on the west, named it "Frankfurt."

When the narrow gauge railroad was built, the company called the station "Fillmore," in honor of one of the backers of the enterprise. February 1, 1882, a few months before the arrival of the Benedictine Fathers, the first postoffice was established with the name of "Roy," and Mr. Cleaver was appointed postmaster.

The history of the town is closely related to the coming of the Benedictine Fathers and the development of the monastery. At that time the town was described as a bit of the old world set down in the new. Just as in the old days, Gervais, St. Paul and St. Louis, on French Prairie, were a bit of old France in the new world, so at that time, and more or less so today, Mt. Angel is a little Germany in the Willamette valley.

It might be well to review a little of the history of Father Adelheim, the prior and founder of the Mt. Angel Monastery. He was born in Switzerland and received his clerical education in the abbey at Engelberg in the canton of Unterwalden, Switzerland. With the celebrating of the eight hundredth anniversary of the founding of the abbey, it was decided to found another colony somewhere on the Pacific coast of America.

Father Adelheim and several brothers were sent to do this. The first church was dedicated here in September, 1881, and in October of that year Father Adelheim said his first Mass here. When he first saw this place he felt he had found the location for the new monastery. The first monastery building was completed in 1884.

On application to the post office department by the Very Rev. Prior Adelheim, the name of "Roy" was changed to Mount Angel. September 19, 1883. About this time the railway company also changed the name of their station from "Fillmore" to Mount Angel.

In 1887 the Mt. Angel college was opened in a frame building 35x30 feet. The monastery and college were later destroyed by fire and in 1903 the massive stone monastery building was completed. This was destroyed by fire in September, 1930, and today two new units on their rebuilding plan have been completed.

Mt. Angel snugly close to the foothills in a rich and fertile valley. The old German and Swiss stock, comprising the foundation for the community, has built up a sturdy and prosperous class of people. The town is known for its wonderful educational facilities, having a large public and parochial school, academy and normal for girls, and the high school and college for boys.

The town is also known for its clean, well-kept homes. The business houses are substantial. Most of the residents own their own homes.

Well is Dug At Cannery In Woodburn

WOODBURN, Oct. 15—A large well, which is expected to supply a great amount of water, is being dug at the Ray-Brown cannery. Work on the well was started Wednesday afternoon. Of course the capacity of the well cannot yet be estimated, but it is expected to be great. A casing 12 inches in diameter is being sunk on the site, which is at the eastern end of the cannery.

At present the source of the water supply is the Woodburn city works. At times this summer it was found that the water supply was not sufficient. Cannery officials believe that the new well will pay for itself in four years. The cannery's water main will probably be connected to both the city's and its own supplies.

Seasonal work at the cannery came to a close Monday afternoon when the last pears were packed. A greater quantity of fruit was put up this year than in previous years. Over 150 tons of pears were packed in one day recently.

In order to give a greater number of persons work this year, two crews, which worked about eight hours each, were employed.
