"Opportunity School," in Salem Only Complete One Of Its Kind in This State

By STEPHEN C. MERGLER

The Salem school district is unique in that it is the only one in the state which operates a full part-time continuation school for children who on account of having to work for all or part of their living, are unable to complete their grade school courses by the regular means.

This year, again under the supervision of Miss Gertrude Anderson, 19 children are attending the Opportunity school, the new name chosen because it more attractively describes the study work offered. Miss Anderson has taught in the Salem school district for the past six years.

Flexibility is the fiber of Salem's Opportunity school. Its program is varied and not set to specific schedules. These qualities adapt it satisfactorily to the needs of working children whose school hours must be governed by their hours of labor. The hours of instruction are arranged to suit the needs of the pupils, some coming as early as 8:00 o'clock in the morning, others in the afternoon.

Jap Kiddies Learn English—While the majority of pupils are completing their deficiencies in seventh and eighth grade subjects, two Japanese children are learning English, another girl is taking a bookkeeping course which she needs in her work. WHEAT PRICE HERE UP ANOTHER CENT

Local wheat prices were boosted another cent yesterday, bringing white to 44 cents and western red two cents lower.

Egg prices held the same after a Saturday increase to 23 cents on mediums and 25 cents on extras. While there is yet no market for apples, a Salem buyer says this will open up later, and predicts that apple growers in this section will be better off than the growers in the heavy producing sections in Washington, where only a certain percentage of contract apples are being accepted.

Few apples are being sold here now, with the top price to growers 60 cents a bushel. Most of those disposed of now to stores are bringing 25 to 35 cents. Top figures on hogs remained at $5.50 yesterday, and lamb quotations were from $4.50 to $5.
