Large Fields Clover in Dale Set In Hills Become Another District As Pleasant View Grows Awkward

By MRS. JAY COOK
Cloverdale lies between Turner and the Pacific highway and it extends as far east as the S. P. railroad. It is bounded on the south by Pleasant View and Summit Hill districts, on the west by Illihee and on the north by Battle Creek.

The district has been known by the name of Pleasant View since 1911. As far back as anyone can remember this and Pleasant View were one, and known by the latter name. The school building, the community center, was located near the Dr. Mary Staple farm, but as the district was so large, it became necessary to have a more central school so the district was divided and the present two room building was erected in 1911 on land purchased from John McKinney.

At one time 52 pupils were enrolled, nine grades were taught and two teachers employed. Mrs. Ed Drager (Mable Harck) was the first primary teacher and Prof. Starr was principal.

It was he who suggested the name of Cloverdale as the lands adjacent to the building were fields of beautiful clover and the community is among the hills.

At the present time there are but 17 pupils and the eighth grade graduates are transported to Turner by the Turner high school bus which goes through here.

Years ago this community was made up of large farms and grain raising was carried on, but now the large farms are a number of smaller farms. Dairying, poultry raising and grain are done now, but the district is known more as a fruit growing center. Logans, strawberries, prunes and nuts are important products. There are eight prune dryers within three miles.

Cloverdale is closely settled with quite modern homes and just now the residents are very happy over the fact that an electric light line is being extended from Turner, by the Portland General Electric company into the district. This will serve at least 18 homes.

This is the first rural district to have electricity extended from Turner. Cloverdale has come a long way in the past seven years in the way of better roads and other improvements.
