NOTE CANCELLED, DEFENSE CLAIMS

A note for $2500 given by Mrs. C. D. McElhaney to Lewis C. McCoy in June, 1930, was cancelled December 15, 1930, by McCoy who died January 24, 1931. Mrs. McElhaney and Edna McElhaney, joint defendant with her in a suit brought by Maud Lentis, administratrix of the estate of McCoy, answers in pleadings filed yesterday in circuit court.

The defendant claims she took care of McCoy who was her brother for four and one-half years preceding his death and that he loaned her the money with the understanding that consideration was services rendered by his sister to him. While there was no written release of her obligations under the note, Mrs. McElhaney claims she was in truth released by McCoy's oral statement.

In her answer the defendant asks the court to declare the note paid and to have it set aside as an estate asset.

SIX HOUR DAY NOT GENERALLY BACKED

Union craftsmen in the city other than the carpenters will not voluntarily go on a six-hour day for the winter, delegates to the trades and labor council decided this week. Consideration previously had been given to instituting the shorter working day between November and March. Under this decision, the plumbers, electricians, lathers and plasterers continue to put in the eight hours of work each day, "where there is anything at all to do," as Frank Marshall, business agent for the council, yesterday said. The decision was made, he said, partly because so little work is available the plan would be of little value.

HABEAS CORPUS FOR WILQUET IS SOUGHT

An action in habeas corpus aimed to release Joe Wilquet from jail where he is now held was filed by his counsel yesterday before Judge L. H. McMahan, who set November 2 as the date for the hearing.

Wilquet's attorney claims the county court had no right to place Wilquet in jail following his removal by the court as administrator of the estate of Mary Gregoire, deceased. Wilquet had no hearing or opportunity to present his side of the case, his counsel argues. When Wilquet was ousted as administrator the court ordered all funds in the Gregoire estate turned over to the Ladd & Bush Trust company and at the same time ordered Wilquet to give a complete account of his administration of the estate to the court.

CHRISTMAS SEAL WORKERS GATHER

Task of Tuberculosis Relief is Outlined Here By Mrs. Dunbar

A seal sale institute for the workers in the sale of the tuberculosis Christmas seals was held at the chamber of commerce rooms yesterday morning and afternoon, conducted by Mrs. Sallie Orr Dunbar, who is executive secretary of the Oregon League to Combat Tuberculosis. Representatives were in attendance from Lane, Lincoln, Benton, Linn and Marion counties. Mrs. Dunbar outlined the work and explained methods of organization in order to sell the number of seals required to carry on the organized fight against tuberculosis.

The delegates present lunched together at the Gray Belle, and later attended a showing of a short talkie film at Warner Bros. Capitol which is intended to spread the appeal for the purchase of seals. Just concluding a tour of the state holding these institutes," said Mrs. Dunbar, "and we have a very fine organization to conduct the seal sale this year. We must maintain the machinery of social welfare, because if it is once dropped it becomes that much more costly to get it organized and going again. Results have been wonderful in cutting down the death rate from tuberculosis; and to carry on this fight we must sell our allotted quota of seals." Following the seal sale institute, a meeting of the Marion County Public Health association was held at which a revised constitution was adopted. The association also ordered resolutions to be prepared endorsing the work of the Marion county department of health and urging a continuance of the support it has received from taxing bodies.

Under the Dome . . . Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

WONDER what will happen now. An opinion by the attorney-general yesterday held that proxy votes on the board of control were not legal. As a result events decided by a proxy vote are invalid. In other words some of the activities of the board the past few months are in jeopardy unless voters are changed or all three members are present to reconvene them.

The opinion sort of upset some important transactions by the board. For instance it appears there are two heads to the state training school for boys, the consolidation of the blind employment institution at Portland with the state school for the blind at Salem isn't, and the new cars being driven by state police were not legally purchased.

Many other matters, largely routine, are also included in this list. Many of them can be adjusted by the two members of the board in Salem occurring. But it is doubtful whether the members would concur in the ouster moves. W. H. Bailie, legal superintendent, and Sam Laughlin, are both at the training school as directing heads.

The proxy votes in question are those of the governor, who is ill in Portland, and has been absent from the capitol since his illness began August 24. The votes of two members present are required to concur upon an action. Van Winkle ruled. The secretary of state and the state treasurer are the other two members of the board.

But in reality, the opinion won't alter the situation much, for as soon as the governor returns, the events can be reconvened, or it is believed the governor might call a board meeting to be held in Portland. However the opinion settles the much muted question, and will delay execution for the job arrives.

In order to shorten the structure and lessen the cost, fills will be made at each end. The new bridge will be 85 feet long, the old one was 125 feet.

When the city engineer inspected the old bridge early in the month, he discovered it to be highly dangerous. The pilings were so badly rotted that the structure was easily pulled over by a light truck. In addition, the flooring was in a dangerous condition.

This is the last of the old wooden bridges in bad shape, the city engineer believes. The South High street structure recently was overhauled by his crew.

Cal Coolidge comes into the spotlight again, in an article certainly not written by himself. The former president, with the aid of Mrs. Cal, executed a black cat bearing a white stripe down its back. At least Coolidge has done something in addition to issuing statements that he would not run. He apparently didn't "choose to run" this time, either.

While a Washington lad of 12 years starts his life sentence in the penitentiary, a youth twice his age will hang this morning. Both had murdered officers of the law. Naturally a boy of tender years gets more sympathy than a young man. In one case it is the first offense before the boy perhaps realized the seriousness—the other was evidently hardened to it.

Governor Julius L. Meier refused to interfere with the sentence of the court in the James Kingsley case, and rightly so. It has no reason. In a state where capital punishment was placed on the statutes by a vote of the people, to alter the sentence in this particular case. It is the law, and backed by the state's electorate, the extreme penalty must be paid.

So at 8:30 this morning, the execution will take place. There will be some persons there who would rather not be present, while there will be others who go because they requested invitations and wish to do so. The hardest task falls upon the penitentiary officials, who like members of the press have no choice in the matter, but they have a duty to perform.

And while all this is going on, poses are searching for some hooches who shot a railroad worker in a holdup. The worker is not expected to live. And just a few days ago another officer was shot at La Grande. It was a fortunate thing for the bandits who did the shooting that the patrolman survived gunshot wounds.

And while considering executions, has become of the man who wrote Kingsley he would hang in his place? Following the noble gesture, nothing more has been heard of him, particularly since there appears little hope but that the death penalty will be extracted. He perhaps found life too sweet to put such a thought into execution.

STOLEN MOTOR CAR FIGURES IN CRASH

Transient Passenger Hurt When Alleged Thief Fails to Stop

Charles York, transient restauranter, yesterday suffered severe cuts on his hip and forehead when the stolen automobile in which he was riding collided at Center and North Capitol streets with a machine driven by Leland DeJardin, son of A. DeJardin of Gervais. Carl Jorgenson of Portland, who was driving the allegedly stolen roadster, was given into the custody of Portland juvenile authorities.

The Portland youth is charged with having stolen the car, belonging to Warren Hessell of that city, there Wednesday night. York was picked up by Jorgenson here yesterday morning.

Young DeJardin claims that the accident resulted from Jorgenson's failure to stop at the through street. Both machines were badly damaged, the DeJardin's to the extent of about $200 and the stolen one virtually wrecked.

The injured man was treated at the Marion county health center. He had been bound for San Francisco but now probably will be unable to travel for a few days. He is being cared for at police headquarters.

Other motor vehicle accidents reported to the police yesterday were as follows: Homer Smith Jr., 675 North Summer street, and Mrs. R. B. Fleming of Salem, on the postoffice driveway; Roy Nelson, 1150 Nebraska street, and Mrs. Dean Shoemaker, 715 Capitol street near Marion.

Marv and Marie Olson, former Luther college stars from Decorah, Ia., formed a fast second base-shortstop combination for Buffalo of the International League.
