TWO NATAL DAYS ARE CELEBRATED

MONMOUTH, Nov. 7.—The 14th birthday anniversary of Char. of H. Newman was observed November 1 at the family home. He was born in Plymouth township, Michigan, in 1857, and has resided for 30 years in Monmouth.

He was married to Miss Emily L. Kellogg at Genoa, Mich., February 22, 1887. They have one daughter, Mrs. Dell Butler of Bull Run, and two grandsons.

Mr. Newman has followed farming, and since coming to Monmouth has been a painter and paperhanger. He has a special interest in grafting a budding fruit tree and rose bushes, and says his goal of achievement along this line is to own an apple tree with every possible sort of apple growing thereon.

Mrs. William McCrae was reminded Thursday, November 5, of the anniversary of her natal day, when a group of friends and neighbors took genial possession of her home for the afternoon, bringing baskets of birthday refreshments.

ST. NICK'S YOUNG ASSISTANT

No, not Christmas presents for aunts and uncles. It's Fred Blatchford, with some articles from his young wood novelty business.

Fred Blatchford Starts Career as Santa Claus' Understudy in Workshop

Rather young to play the role of good St. Nick, a Salem boy nevertheless has started in earnest on a business which reminds one of those airy young dreams of Santa Claus' workshop. The youth in question is Fred Blatchford, graduate of Salem high school and freshman at Willamette last year.

Here's what he's doing: making all kinds, sizes and descriptions of gaily painted wood novelties. So heavily has he gone into it that his parents, Dr. and Mrs. B. Blatchford, must wish—occasionally at least—that he'd leave them a little room in their home.

Fred only has the garage, the basement, part of the upstairs and the front porch devoted to cutting out, painting and displaying his handiwork.

It's no passing fancy with him, either. If some youngsters are born with a silver spoon in their mouths, Young Blatchford must have clutched a hammer. Even before he started to school at all, he took great delight in nailing apple boxes together on his father's orchard and ranch near Portland.

He put together between two and three thousand of these a season at the age when most other boys would be more interested in smashing sister's dolls, or whatnot.

Always fiddling about with the hammer in junior high school here he took manual training, and his work won him several prizes, including some at the boys' achievement exposition held two years ago. As a junior high student, he was turning out on his own lathe lamps for a local furniture store, and while in high school did picture framing for a local store.

From this start, the lure of wood and paint has divorced him, probably permanently, from legal pursuits wished for him. He studied law at Willamette last year, but doesn't see much future in this crowded field.

"Besides, I'd rather keep on with this work and study interior decoration, probably in a California school," he says. Fred has fitted up the basement of his father's lathe and power saw there; in the garage he employs his electric spray, and upstairs picture framing, hand

Building Patrol At High School Goes in Effect

To stop high school students from littering up the grounds and nearby property with rubbish, Principal Fred Wolf has appointed a squad of 14 boys to patrol around the building and clean up the waste paper being thrown away by the students.

The patrol boys yesterday are said to have padded students who threw litter about the grounds. The same scheme was put successfully into effect last year by the principal.

Mention several weeks ago was made to Dr. H. H. Olinger, chairman of the school board, and to Superintendent George Hug, that students were creating the unsightly litter.

String Quartet Latest Musical Group at W. U.

A men's stringed quartet made its initial bow at Willamette university Friday at the student convocation, offering three numbers which delighted the students.

Professor Marshall took pride in presenting the new group which is the third new musical ensemble organized at Willamette this year. The university band, which is doing excellent work, is recently organized and the university choir of 60 men's and women's voices is a third new group.

The quartet is composed of Chris Seely who plays first violin, Al King second violin, Verne Wilson viola and Chester McCain who plays the cello.

The program presented included "Larghetto by Handel, 'The Mill' by Raff and 'Mystic Hour' by Singala.

Somewhere, in an executive office, a director of advertising rises in his chair. The budget—his budget—is questioned.

Vigorously he moves in defense of media, of space requirements, of insertion timing.

And yet, behind his defense, how certain is he of the underlying truths about the raw material his budget buys? About circulation volume, circulation values, the facts of circulation distribution?

Positively, accurately he knows these things if his budget covering advertising space calls only for publications of audited circulation.

He knows—and business accepts—the indisputable character of circulation facts from the Audit Bureau of Circulations. The full story of circulation practice is given freely and frankly by A. B. C. publications. They open up everything to the

Under the Dome . . . Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

WELL, at last Oregon State broke into the win column in the Pacific Coast conference. While Oregon rested from its eastern conquests, the staters took Montana into camp. But the big game is next Saturday at Eugene. However, since the rest of the paper has plenty of football news, this column will digress.

Sometimes our courts are considered invulnerable, but reports of their own actions belie the impression. Was it not last Tuesday when the Marion county court returned 20 not true bills. In fact its batting average was far below .500, since it returned only 18 true bills, and these have yet to be proven.

Two political war horses picked the capitol press room yesterday in which to recount adventures during the state legislature. From their accounts there perhaps will never be any days like the "good old ones" when they were serving the public. And from the sound of things, this fact should be much regretted.

Albert Hunter, a democrat from Union county, and James Stewart, who represented three eastern Oregon counties, including Wheeler, as a republican, met at the press room, and that is when some real reminiscence was begun. It seems they sat across the aisle from each other, and though of different parties, often agreed.

Hunter is now a member of the state accident commission, in addition to being father-in-law to "Scooty" Dutton, of Portland, major in the national guard, who is gaining a wide reputation in running Thomas E. Riley a close second as the handsomest man in uniform. Stewart, well, everybody knows Jim Stewart of the state land board.

It took a long time to learn just why Stewart left the newspaper business to enter politics, but the secret is out at last. Jim gives two major reasons, one that six men committed suicide before he finally quit, and the second that after winning the world war Jim could see no reason for conducting his paper any longer at Fossil, Ore.

But here Jim qualifies the real reason. He admitted that six men committed suicide, but he said he had to work on them for 23 years before the results were effected. Well, if they hadn't ended their own lives, they perhaps would have been grinning yet at some of
