have its source in a lake such as is the case with many other mountain streams. Safeguards Needed Before Investing

I am informed that in 1924, which was an extremely dry year, the minimum flow was 15,000, 000 feet. It is obvious that a new project, such as is contemplated through proposed heavy expenditures, should provide adequate expansion for the future and for peak demands during the months when the water is lowest.

The watershed of the Little North Fork of the Santiam River has already been partially logged off, and I understand that logging operations are now being carried on immediately to the north of the headwaters of the river. The watershed is not a closed area, and it seems highly improbable that it could be made one. As the timber on the slopes overlooking the river becomes ripe, the timber will be removed so that snow deposits now affording the water supply will be exposed to melting, and reserve storage will not be available during the warm summer months. Also, after rains, the ground will dry out much more rapidly when fully exposed through removal of the timber. There is also danger of forest fires in the Little North Fork area. A serious fire might conceivably eliminate most of the forest growth in one season. Should such a catastrophe occur, the taxpayers of Salem might be confronted with the proposition of paying for a non-revenue producing "dead horse," such as some other cities in Oregon now have on their hands. As an illustration of the possibility of the removal of protection to the watershed through fires. I have only to cite the fire in 1924 above Detroit on the lower Breitenbush River, and the big burn below Detroit several years before. These fires burned over thousands of acres of timber before they were finally extinguished. Similar fires on a small stream like the Little North Fork, which has no surplus water in the sum-

Upon Watershed Other factors to be taken into account are vested and riparian rights of property owners, and stream pollution. Assuming that the federal government would permit all the timber on the Little North Fork to stand and decay, could the gvoernment assure the city of Salem of a closed area for the source of its water supply, similar to the area comprising the Bull Run Reserve If so, what would become of the vested rights of the settlers and farmers and the mining company within the area? It is conceivable that if the government would grant the city a closed area , the city might tested.
