FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD BRIDE ELOPES

BEATRICE BARCLAY ACKERELL and HUSBAND

The recent alarm, broadcast on the disappearance of 15-year-old Beatrice Barclay Pickerell, daughter of John C. Pickerell, retired vice-president of the Western Union Telegraph Company and reputed millionaire, of Montclair, N. J., recalls the romance and elopement of the young girl who became a bride at the age when most girls are reading Hans Anderson. Rescued from drowning last Summer by Bevis Pickerell, young Montclair truckman, Beatrice promptly fell in love with her savior, and he with her. The young man became a frequent visitor at the Barclay mansion until the young woman's parents found that the couple was seriously intending marriage. Then he was forbidden to see his sweetie again. But family objections only made the lovers more determined and they finally eloped and were married in Roseland, N. J. Beatrice returned home, intending to keep her marriage secret, but her mother found her wedding ring and the young bride fled with her husband to Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., where they lived happily until tracked down by the girl's irate parents. The bride was brought back home and confined in the Barclay mansion until she made her sensational escape the other day, with the aid of a bed sheet rope. She is now in hiding with friends and her husband is in the hands of the police on charges made by his involuntary father-in-law. Pickerell intends to fight the annulment proceedings instituted by the Barclays, refusing to give up his bride unless she, herself wishes it.
