

Local News Briefs

Inventory Filed—A supplementary inventory of the estate of Estelle Kaylor, which includes assets which were not listed in the first inventory, was filed by Anna Kaylor Conklin, who is executrix of the estate. The assets are mostly government bonds and Oregon Pulp & Paper stock with an appraised value of $14,138.63. She stated that the U. S. bonds were understood by her to be gifts to Bula Henderson and Mildred Richards, nieces of the deceased, but now finds that the gift was not completed. She also stated that the paper company stock was not listed as she understood that a survivorship right gave it to her automatically. Land she held in Lincoln county was deemed worthless and so listed in the supplementary inventory.

Diphtheria Contacts Checked—Although Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer, yesterday still was doubtful of the diphtheria case reported south of Salem actually being that disease, he supervised checking up on possible contacts with the case. The patient, a woman, was practically recovered from the ailment.

Seven Diseases Reported—Outbreak in Marion county last week of seven communicable diseases is reported in a bulletin released yesterday by the state board of health. The 25 cases included the following: pneumonia eight, chickenpox four, influenza six, diphtheria, tuberculosis and measles two each, and mumps one.

Plaintiff Wins—Eldridge Smith, plaintiff in action against Harry A. Nelson and others, was awarded $50 when the jury brought in verdict in civil court yesterday morning. Baker in Accident—F. A. Baker, special deliveryman for the Salem postoffice, yesterday reported to the police that his automobile, coming out of the alley on State street between Front and Commercial, struck broadside a car driven by Carlos Lagerfeld, 1125 1/2 Jefferson street. He stated that he stopped before entering State street. This is denied by Lagerfeld, who at the time was looking to the rear. No damages were reported.

Survey Made—George Fair, engineer of the Southern Pacific from Portland and Roadmaster Johnson and Engineer Swart went to Brooks Wednesday to examine a situation on the station grounds where the county road cuts through the S. P. right of way. The company is asking for the road to be switched over and the party reported that little difficulty would attach to the job.

Examinations Today—A heavy examination schedule is billed today at Willamette university with many of the students finishing their last ones today. However there will be a number who must return for other examinations Friday morning. Registration is starting now and will doubtless pick up today as many of the students will have examinations out of the way, allowing time to figure out new schedules.

Collection Restrained—Collection of lease moneys by the state land board from Fred Wetzel, administrator of the estate of Frances E. Underwood, deceased, was restrained by order of Judge Gale S. Hill here yesterday pending settlement of a suit being brought by the plaintiff who claims the state's lease collections have been too large.

Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

SEVERAL prominent visitors were at the state capitol yesterday. Whether the absence of Governor Moler from Salem had anything to do with their sojourns here or not is unknown, but Floyd Cook, chairman of the republican state committee, and Ralph Watson, political writer of the Oregon Journal, were both at the capitol.

Good news for the press gallery, Charles M. Thomas has announced his house warming dinner will be held tomorrow night. The dinner was slated earlier, but events delayed the party. Thomas said it really would be a good affair as he has been this long getting ready for it. Fine, mark us up as coming!

Thomas has been busy recently with street-car litigation and numerous investigations of same. Yesterday he announced a campaign for congressional action to strip lower federal courts of jurisdiction over state regulatory bodies having to do with public utilities. He said his proposed act has met with favor with other state commissions.

The governor is now out of the state, so it is now Governor Willard L. Marks. The new chief will be here today from his home in Albany to occupy the executive chair for the third time within a year. The novelty probably has worn off, so Marks comes to do some real work. His policy will be to act as a substitute during Moler's absence.

William Hanley, a member of the majority group on the state highway commission, was here yesterday. He reported that while many knew that Governor Moler left Portland Tuesday night, much of it was hearsay. He said he was sure he left, as he was down at the station to see him off. The governor's party was optimistic over a successful trip, he added.

Colonel A. E. Clark went with the governor to represent the public utilities commission. Few have wondered why Charles M. Thomas was not the proper one to make this trip, as he is head of the utilities department. Well, he was the proper one to go, but Clark has ambitions for U. S. senatorship, while Thomas is not interested. That should clear it up.

Rufus C. Holman leaves next week for his mid-winter tour of inspection of state institutions in eastern Oregon. While on his trip he will make ten addresses, all but one to be on the "Board of Control." He expects to return here the week following. Holman said he would acquaint himself
