BOOTLEGGER DROPS IN SOCIAL RATING

Also Lowered Financially By General Situation Says U. S. Attorney

The social and economic scale essayed by the bootlegger is steadily going down, opined George Neuner, United States district attorney, Portland, while here on business Tuesday.

"Where a few years ago we found our bootleggers well dressed and readily able to put up cash bail of $1000 or more, now we find the men are poorly kept and many times unable to furnish bail. Depression has done its work with the bootleggers; jail sentences also have scared them out for now we are sending more men to jail and taking less fines and on second offense a jail sentence is imperative."

Neuner scouted the idea that the 18th amendment would be changed.

"Forty-six states ratified it, 33 had prohibition before the amendment came up for action; I see no hope of getting 36 states to vote now for repeal," Neuner declared. He said he was well pleased with the enforcement activities of Amos D. Woodcock of the department of justice, who is nationally in charge of enforcement. He characterized Woodcock as a careful, courageous, sensible officer who was steadily building up the quality of the enforcement work.

Neuner also praised the state police in Oregon and the general work of law enforcement that group is doing. He said he had a high regard for the ability of Charles Pray, head of the state police system.

Questioned about politics in Oregon, Neuner said he had no specific plans. He looks for a hot fight in the 1932 primaries and general election on the election of United States senator. Bert E. Haney is expected to run for the democrat nomination, Neuner reported.

M'GILCHRIST WINS IN SUPREME COURT

The state supreme court Tuesday affirmed the decree of Judge Jacob Kanzler of the Multnomah county circuit court, in a suit brought by James McGillchrist of Salem to recover from the F. W. Woolworth company the amount of $2399.80 for labor and services performed. The lower court held for the plaintiff.

McGilchrist alleged that he was employed by the defendant corporation during a three year apprenticeship period at a salary of from $18 to $25 a week, with the understanding that at the expiration of that time, he was to be appointed manager of a store, with a minimum salary of $2500 a year and a percentage of the profits.

The plaintiff charged that after serving his apprenticeship period he was refused the management of a store. He later severed his connection with the corporation and filed a suit in the United States district court in Portland to recover damages for alleged breach of contract.

McGilchrist is a resident of Salem.

On the first charge, possession of untaxed parts of a game animal, a deer, Van Arman pleaded guilty and on motion of the deputy district attorney the case was continued for sentence. The deer was killed in the mountains about Scotts Mills.

To the second charge, unlawful possession of venison, Van Arman also pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 30 days in jail and to pay a fine of $100. He is in the jail, and will also probably serve out the $100 as he has no funds. He was said to be selling the venison.

QUAKE SCENES IN SANTIAGO

These two photos give some idea of the havoc wrought by the recent disastrous earthquake in Santiago, Cuba, which took toll of twelve lives and injured hundreds, as well as razing or damaging most of the buildings in the city. The above scenes are typical of those that prevail in almost every street in the former capital of Cuba. Though the first severe shock lasted only 30 seconds, it damaged buildings so badly that succeeding minor shocks completed the work of destruction.

Under the Dome . . . Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

THERE'S no stopping Charles Spaulding in his fight for what he thinks should be done on the highway commission, and his talk yesterday indicated he would continue fighting and opposing the majority on the commission. At least he will have to if he refuses to vote yes, as he indicated in his address to Kiwanians.

He will have another chance at the other two members of the road group this afternoon when a non-public meeting will be held at the Imperial hotel to consider the 1932 program. One of Spaulding's issues brought out at the last meeting was advising the leading banker in the state, Mr. Ainsworth, how he should go about borrowing a million dollars.

Whether or not there will be any kind of a show at this scheduled quiet meeting of the commission is not known, but indications are it will be a highly important one today which means Governor Meier will be back in the state. It has been wondered by some if he would not be called into this session.

With Meier's return today a renewal of political statements will be expected to run or not to run, that seems to be the big question. While Meier will be in Portland, it is not expected he will attend the monthly board of control meeting at Salem today, which means Holman and Hoss would have to carry on without the governor.

Also with the governor's arrival from his reported successful trip in the east, Willard Marks learned when he dropped in at the press room yesterday. Marks found the newspapermen waiting.

Floyd Cook, chairman of the state republican committee, the group which lost out in the last gubernatorial campaign, was in Salem yesterday. Cook says Meier's statement that he would not run again has his supporters and appointees pretty much

WARRENDALE DAM PROJECT FAVORED

Farmers Union Takes Action At Session of State Board in Salem

Resolution will be forwarded to congress by the state board of the Oregon Farmers' Union favoring the construction of the Warrendale dam and urging that congress stress importance of release of the engineers' report on this project as soon as possible.

This resolution was voted at a meeting of the state board held at the chamber of commerce here yesterday, with L. H. McBe, Dallas, president, in charge. Mrs. Betty M. Kappauf, Eugene, is secretary. Six counties were represented: Linn, Lane, Polk, Marion, Yamhill and Washington.

The executive board also will forward query to congress to learn what is being done about the water-rate control that President Hoover outlined in his 12-point relief plan. Oregon shipper will suffer so long as this is held up, as well as will important business industries in the state, the board members declared in authorizing the query.

Much of the discussion yesterday was about organization within the state, and encouraging reports were brought by organizers who have been working in Washington county the past two weeks. Four locals are now functioning in that county, and three are in process of organization.

Organization will be pushed greatly and other counties will be entered.

Apparently waiting for something to happen, and as expressed to him, in a receptive mood for any kind of a news break.

Yesterday was Roosevelt Memorial day, according to the notice on calendars. Wonder if the memorial this year had anything particularly in mind concerning the situation in which Franklin D. Roosevelt finds himself, with Smith willing to run which naturally takes away some hopes of his own democratic ambition.

Attorneys for Ben Boloff, convicted of criminal syndicalism, are hard to convince. The supreme court yesterday for the second time denied a rehearing of his case which it previously affirmed, but no sooner did notice reach Portland than his attorneys stated they would file a third petition for rehearing.

The shipping repair case, which has been going on for several months, with many hearings held at Salem, is now being conducted at LaGrande in the taking of more testimony. A. F. Harvey, examining for the public utilities commissioner, and Attorney William Ellis, representing shippers, were in eastern Oregon on this issue.
