WHERE NEW CRISIS LOOMS IN CHINA

With the seizure of Harbin, Manchuria, by Japanese forces, a new crisis in the Far East promises to take the spotlight from the storm-center at Shanghai. Harbin, the bone of contention in the Russo-Japanese war of 1905, is more than half Russian and is regarded as the hub of Soviet influence in the province. It is an important railway center, second only to Mukden. The occupation of the city by forces of the Yellow Empire is reported as having caused bitter resentment in Manchuria. Japanese expatriates from Vladivostok, Siberia, within striking distance of Harbin, tell alarming tales of growing anti-Japanese sentiment in the Russian stronghold. Japanese sympathizers have been subjected to the greatest indignities many having been jailed. Martial law and a strict censorship is in force, and to crown everything the Soviet Union is concentrating a huge Red Army in Vladivostok. This force, said to number 70,000 men backed up with formidable batteries of artillery, is parked right on the Manchurian border, waiting for what? The map above shows the relative positions of Vladivostok and Harbin. The strategic position of the former city can readily be seen.

In addition to cost of the buses authorized by this transportation law, objection here is on the fact that high school students only are hauled to school, while the younger boys and girls have to walk. Often these busses go past the rural schoolhouses where the smaller children attend. It is planned to raise funds for carrying the matter into court by holding benefit events within the districts where support is given the injunction move.

JAPANESE CANNOT WIN SAYS HEWITT

(Continued from page 1) Methodist Episcopal activities in the province of Shantung, China, Dean Hewitt held that, like the blacksmith who ropes the lips of an obstinate horse, to divert the source of pain before shoeing him, "Japan's put a twitch on the nose of the world, by invading Shanghai, while she consolidated Manchuria."

"The Japanese have intentionally gone into Manchuria, driven by fright that they might starve to death. The Japanese consul recently told me that the building of tariff walls in world countries has prevented Japan from getting raw materials. She must be an industrial nation. It is coal and especially the iron, that the Japanese want from Manchuria."
