OX-TEAM TEACHERS STILL IN SCHOOLS

So Indicates Stetson in Address Before Educators of County

SILVERTON, Feb. 15—Prof. Fred L. Stetson of the educational department of the University of Oregon was the principal speaker at the local county teachers' institute here Saturday.

Prof. Stetson discussed the educational plan of Oregon and reviewed it since its inception in 1859. Prof. Stetson indicated that there were still some hangovers from the ox-team days in the Oregon education system.

Prof. Stetson explained the new Oregon educational plan which was outlined by the Oregon Teachers' association. The points on this he touched upon included: the territorial organization, the institutional organization which included the six-three-three plan; teaching efficiency; practicability of the work; guidance; publicity, indicating that the plan should have much more publicity so that it can be more readily understood by everyone; the progressiveness of the plan, in that if any part of it falls that part should be thrown out.

Dr. L. E. Forbes of the Oregon State Normal school, gave an interesting talk on character education.

The morning was given over to the departmental work. H. E. Tobie, superintendent of Stayton schools, was chairman.

Silverton Man Urges Fair Space for Antiques, Especially of Pioneers

By LILLIE L. MADSEN SILVERTON, Feb. 10—M. L. Gottenburg of Silverton recently expressed an idea that has fallen in fertile ground and state roots in the minds of many people surrounding Silverton.

Mr. Gottenburg, who is interested in the fine arts and is a collector of antiques, has suggested that space be set aside at the state fairground for a place to keep these intact so that the young people "can see how things were done in the days that used to be," he said. Besides, he added, it would bring many of the old pioneers to the fairgrounds who might not otherwise attend.

Many people who have heard of the suggestion have expressed the hope that it may some day be carried out. Mr. Gottenburg even suggested that the display could be made self-supporting if "a nickel or a dime were charged to see the things."

Some people, upon hearing the suggestion, expressed the thought that it was time for Oregon to start saving some of these things before they are all destroyed and that the Oregon state fairgrounds, which itself was started by Oregon pioneers, is the proper place for such a collection.

Mr. Gottenburg has long been interested in collecting relics of pioneer days. In his collection which he has gathered from every corner of the Willamette valley, are two automobiles which have attracted considerable attention from various parts of the country. The one is an old Maxwell, one of the first 5000 in number built, with ability still to go.

Even now it is credited with making 30 miles an hour when it feels just right. It still hits on all cylinders which are two in number and which are placed horizontally. The carburetor sets on the right hand side directly back of the radiator. The magneto is on top of the crank case where one would ordinarily look for the cylinders. It has four separate connections from radiator to cylinders, and an intake manifold three feet long. It is still equipped with its original coal oil lamps and carbide gas headlights.

Jack Rogers of Salem was the first owner of this car. But Mr. Gottenburg's collection contains burgies and wagons, farm and house implements which date further back than does the automobile. These, he says, he is willing to loan to the state fair exhibit if such an exhibit were to be created. It is the belief of Silverton people that many an old attic in the Willamette valley has antiques and other pioneer relics which would be enjoyed by many more people at the state fair than the few who may see them, should they be purchased by antique collectors.
