LARGE ACREAGE OF BEANS CONTRACTED

West Stayton residents feel that prosperity for their district has already turned the corner and come into sight with the signing of contracts for a total of 142 acres of Kentucky Wonder beans. Contracts for 120 acres have been made with the Ray-Maling Canning company at Hillsboro while the Stayton Canning company has contracted for 42 acres.

According to Carl Gibson, president of the West Stayton Community club, the people are encouraged by this news. Since the average yield an acre is three and one-half tons and since the contract price is $65 a ton, Gibson foresees at least an average yield of $227.50 to the acre from the beans. On the 142 acres contracted this would mean a gross return of $46,885.

The price for picking the beans will be 85 cents a hundred or $17 a ton, which means a large amount of the incoming revenue will be thoroughly distributed in the community.

Last summer the market for beans was very light and many farmers raised no crops whatever. This year canners have used up their carry-over stock and are back in the market with new contracts for the growers.

DENTISTS' GUESTS SPEAKERS

Under the Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

HEAVY eaters will have a hard time making both ends meet if they should happen to work for the state. The board of control has set the limit to $2 a day for meals on the basis of 50, 65 and 85 cents and hotel rooms at $2.50 a night. This makes the second regulation placed on traveling expenses.

The action of the board reminds us of the old slogan on glee club trips for the college, which was "what's the limit." The manager used to inform all members of the club before each meal what they would be allowed for the meals, and if the limit was exceeded, it came out of their own pockets. It takes us back to the good old college days.

Hal Hoss voted against the proposal because he believed many who now charge less would be tempted to take advantage of the limit. Holman suggested all who do this be fired. At that limit, outsiders who now wish jobs better get their applications in, because the problem will be a big one, as the maximum isn't so much, particularly on trains.

But on the other hand the maximum allowed during the present conditions should be ample to feed all but the heaviest eaters, and it will be a gauge to go by. It may have a tendency to eliminate much of the travel on state business, likewise adding to the saving of the taxpayers' hard earned money.

The matter of selling more flax was informally discussed by the board and several changes in the sales staff was effected. William Elzing, secretary, said at the board meeting that if he could operate the flax industry without losing money this year, he would have accomplished a big job. The industry so far has operated at a loss of almost a half million dollars.

Vic Meyers may have lost out badly at the Seattle election as far as votes are concerned, but he did anything but lose. He made a wide reputation for himself which should be good advertising, and he made out of an otherwise sarcastic and tense campaign one of wise-cracks and general good feeling. And that's something.

SPRING OPENING'S DETAILS PLANNED

With features never before used in a spring opening planned, the Ad club committee is starting its annual job of getting the people of the community spring-minded. Warmth is in the air, daffodils are stretching their legs and girls are looking at the windows showing spring frocks. Then Easter is early this year, so Spring opening is set for March 11.

Merchants are getting back of the Salem Ad club program and will cooperate in every way. It is hoped this year to have the auto dealers join as well because there are many new lines of automobiles which the public are interested in.

Gardner Knapp, president of the Ad club, is taking the lead in the job of putting over the stunts this year but is backed up by an active committee.
