LADS ISSUE ONLY PAPER IN CHITINA

Copies of an interesting bit of journalistic effort, a two-page mimeograph newspaper, The Weekly Herald, edited by three 13-year-old boys at Chitina, Alaska, were displayed by J. R. Shepherd of the Palace Court apartments, formerly U. S. commissioner in Alaska.

The boys, Adrian and Phillip Nelson and their chum, William "Billy" Moore, have published the local paper for the past year, it being the only medium in which local news there is circulated. Though only slightly larger than typewriter paper, the two sheets contain short stories and a number of small ads, and pictures. In the year the circulation has grown to 200, and the boys are aiming for 400 paid readers. It costs five cents a copy.

Chitina is located on the Copper river near the great Kennicott copper mine. The Weekly Herald is the town's first paper.

A February 14 issue tells of the thermometer dropping 30 degrees in eight hours; and of one man killing 90 silver fox during the season.

UNION PACIFIC TO GIVE SCHOLARSHIP

Six scholarships of $100 each, awarded annually by the Union Pacific Railroad company to vocational agricultural high school students living in counties through which the railroad operates, were announced Saturday at the state educational department.

The awards are for agricultural training at Oregon State college. In each case a principal and alternate were named, the award to go to the second student if the winner is not able to take advantage of the offer.

In Multnomah county Eldon Metzger and Stewart Richey, both of Gresham, were chosen for first and second. Herbert Wahl and James Barclay, Knappa, were high in Clatsop county.

First in Wallowa county went to Charles Nobles, Enterprise; Tom Willett, Wallowa, alternate. Maurice Frakes and Buel Clement, Ontario, were chosen in Malheur county.

In Union county, Charles Micklebrook and Ray Conklin, both of Union were outstanding. DeSchautes county choices were Bruce Johnson and Lloyd Douns, Redmond.

Grand Jurors to Take up Murder Charge Tuesday

The Marion county grand jury has been summoned to convene here Tuesday at 10 a. m. to consider pending matters, among them the first-degree murder charge to be made against Harry Erpelding. The jury is the hold-over body from the December and January terms of court.

Judge L. H. McManish goes to Albany Monday to hold a week of court there. He will not resume circuit court here until April.

Chapman Estate Appraisal Made

The estate of the late Jennie T. Chapman has a value of $26,196, appraisers reported in probate court here yesterday. The bulk of the property consists of a one-half interest in downtown Salem real estate appraised at $25,000. Miscellaneous personal property was valued at $1196. Appraisers were Henry L. Meyers, W. W. Moore and L. R. Aldrich. Oda L. Chapman is executrix of the estate.

Under the Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

AND still the suspense, until the search, still the uncertainty and still the anguish as a result of the kidnapping of the famous Lindbergh baby. There is but one question on the lips of every person — has the Lindbergh baby been found? And so far, to the present writing, there could be but one reply.

Education in Oregon will possibly be subject to a great change at the meeting of the board of higher education in Portland tomorrow. The committee on courses has been working on a new program, which is expected to eliminate many duplications in studies at the university and at the state college.

But since Willamette university is not a state institution, but an endowed school, the students there last night, not worried by the state board of education, enjoyed the annual Freshman Glee. The Frosh not only have been working day and night on their particular day songs but prepared the symposium for the stunt. They were the host.

Bits for Breakfast

house — sold Fort Yamhill — finds its final resting place in this beautiful park beside the placid waters of the old river of Yamhill. May the old historic fort here stand till the worms of time crumble it into the dust from whence it came, and may the old flag ever float over it.

Mr. George J. in quoting Sheridan's salutation to him in Washington in Chinook did not get some of the words as correctly as, no doubt, the general gave them. Very freely translated, they meant: "How do you do, good friend; you come right into my house and we will have a big talk. You well know what long ago was my Grand Ronde home."

It was late in the night of March 26, 1856, that Sheridan, at Fort Vancouver, got word of the plight of the settlers in the middle country near The Dalles. He, with his 40 fighting dragoons, was of the way to their relief at 2 o'clock in the morning of the 27th. Arriving at the point of danger that day, while he was making an examination that would enable him to prepare a soldier who was killed at his side, the same bullet fired from an Indian's gun grazing the bridge of Sheridan's nose.

But Sheridan persisted in his examination, and, staking his own life and that of all his dragoons upon chances few men would take, he bagged the hostiles and saved all the settlers and their women and children who had not been killed in the massacre of the day before — and nine of the leading Indians engaged in the massacre were court-martialed and hanged; a lesson that was salutary and ended all such trouble there.

The Indians on the 26th had killed 17 settlers and wounded about as many more. Among the killed was Jacob White, an uncle of the wife of the Bits man; a man named Kell, a relative of the Aurora Kells, was also killed, and his brother wounded.

Sheridan received a citation in general orders, from New York headquarters of the regular army, for gallantry at the engagement at The Dalles; but no promotion. Promotions were slow in those days. He remained a second lieutenant until after he left Oregon, late in 1861, for the Civil war, as will appear later in this series. When about to leave Oregon he told Hon. A. Bush of Salem that he believed he might, if the war lasted long, become a captain! Every reader who knows history is familiar with his quick promotions — and that he was soon the greatest cavalry leader and hero America had produced.

CHANGES MADE IN LEGION'S PROGRAM

Two changes have been made in the lively entertainment program scheduled for Tuesday night's meeting of Capitol Post No. 9, American Legion, Commander Irl S. McSherry announced yesterday. The address concerning perpetuation of memories of incidents of the last war, slated to be given by Major-General Thomas H. Rilea, instead will be made by Chaplain John W. Beard of Portland, formerly chaplain for the 91st division and now for the 162nd infantry.

As influenza has incapacitated many of the boys at state training school, the Brush College community while the Knowers will get service from the line which supplies the Oak Grove neighborhood.

Commander McSherry has issued an invitation to all ex-service men to attend the program.
