GOLDEN BEAUTY - THE EYES HAVE IT

the woman of the future who desires to be ultra-fash ionable in her make up will wear lashes of gold to veil her slumberous orbs. Though artificial eyelashes are not new, having long been in use on stage and veil her slumberous orbs. Though artificial eyelashes are not new, having long been in use on stage and screen, they have never reached the point where they were accepted by the ordinary seeker after beauty. But now it is proposed to introduce them for formal evening wear in silver, gold and platinum, to suit the individual purse. Demonstrated at the convention, the eighteen-carat eyelashes at first produced a weird effect on the beholder—especially if the beholder were a man—but after a while one gets accustomed to milady's facial frills and ceases to marvel at anything but milady's fortitude in her pursuit of beauty. And it is not the eyes alone that have it. Woman's crowning glory, too, is to be subjected to reform. Hair, lacquered in gold and silver, is to top off the evening ensemble of the woman of fashion. And, to go to the other extreme, her toenails, painted to harmonize with her gown, will peep through Gandhi sandals. Thus, it would seem that when the poet of the future versifies about the "dear eyes" and "spun-gold hair" of his lady love, he'll be uttering more truth than poetry.
