Work on Sweetland Oval is Progressing, Cinders Will Arrive Soon

Rainy weather is all that is holding up the work on the track at Willamette university, according to Burgess Ford, assistant track coach.

If good weather had prevailed, the track would now have been all graded and ready for the cinders.

The work will progress rapidly now if the rain stops for a while. Excavation will be a minor problem with the ground soft. The northeast corner of Sweetland field is about two feet higher than the southwest corner, but the main bulk of the track is fairly level.

Cinders will come a carload at most any time now. A good solid dirt foundation will be laid and then a six inch bed of cinders placed, insuring an excellent track.

Track men at Willamette are now working hard and are spurred on to greater efforts by the track improvement program which is going on. Many Important-Meets Scheduled The building of a track had been talked in previous years and some of the students were dublous as to whether or not anything of note would be accomplished this season. Funds for the work are rather lean, but there will nevertheless be considerable done.

Many important track meets are slated for the new Willamette oval this spring. In addition to a number of dual meets between Willamette university and its northwest conference opponents, there is also a possibility that the northwest conference track meet will be held here.

Then there will be the Willamette valley high school meet Salem high will have some of its meets here and the Salem Y. M. C. A. track team may also have one or two of its meets on the

Jones Only Winner Over Robin Reed

Jones has enjoyed a great seaon in spite of his years and is the only grappler who has the honor of holding a win over Robin Reed during the past six months. Jones took the odd fall from Reed in Portland last Wednesday night, but failed to make the weight of 145 pounds, so Reed still has his world championship

Perhaps in another meeting Reed might win, but Jones would have taken Reed last Wednesday night even with three or four less pounds to throw against the clever Reedsport Robin.

The battle royalists are Jack Wan Vleet, Louis Cross, Sidney VanLydegraf and Otaker Sevick. Plant states that these boys are not experienced wrestlers, since to put grapplers of science and standing into such a melee might spoil the affair. They were selected for their eed and pugnacity and one of the biggest tragedy-comedy acts to be staged here in a long time will be seen in this four-way meet.
