Under the Dome...

It looked like old times around the capitol yesterday. The last few hours of candidacy filings brought many familiar faces to the capitol. Robert Stanfield, former U. S. senator, was here to seek his old seat. Floyd Cook brought down filings of presidential electors and delegates, and there were dozens more.

When the filings closed at 5 o'clock, the offices of the secretary of state were filled with late comers. Carl Abrams, former secretary of the board of control, was there to file for the legislature. He said he was getting longshore for the capitol. Frank Longman, speaker of the house, also filed late.

Father T. V. Keenan was on hand, not to file for office, but to see some of the candidates. He is offering them the opportunity of advertising in his particular paper. Latest reports from him were that business was good. He also greeted old timers, and Roy Meyers was here to renew acquaintances.

Charles Pray, superintendent of state police, now can tell about his operation, and he does so very graphically. Pray went to Portland Monday and had a delicate operation performed on his nose. And to watch him describe the size of bone clippers and instruments used while he was watching, would make one think it was anything but delicate.

It was a great day for politicians. Even Rufus Holman was in the lobby yesterday shaking hands with filers and friends. He was also revealed that Holman not only will have a fight in the primary election to resume his office.

Farm Laborers Are Requested; Six Are Placed

Applications for farm dealers are beginning to come into the U. S.-Y. M. C. A. Employment bureau, Manager E. A. Kenney reported yesterday. During the day six men were placed at agricultural work, the best daily figure of the season. Little other work seems available.

By an increase in the two south crews on the state highway employment project from 19 to 15, the foreman will conclude this week Saturday. The 30 men will receive but three days' work each.

Dangerous Corner in Road Turn Improved
BETHLE, April 5.—The crew engaged in county roadside improvement, providing work for unemployed, is now working on the road near the J. M. Nichols dairy farm. They are making a fine fill in front of the J. Hamrick farm and have filled in a dangerous corner leading into a side road east of the O. L. Brubaker farm. Mr. Brubaker donated the corner of his land for this purpose.

Rev. and Mrs. S. Hamrick and son Eugene Hamrick of Oklawaha City, are in Roseburg for a few days' visit with their daughter, Mrs. Othe D. Smith and family.

Things appeared all mixed up. State senators were filing for congress, representatives were seeking seats in the senate, ex-official holders were after seats in the house, and even officials in the state labor movement, such as C. M. Ferguson, put their money on the counter for the house of representatives.

Fillings were about the only major news occurring under the dome yesterday, in fact it was about the only thing happening. A formidable list of names will go out before the voters on May 29 from which to choose, and there will be more competition this year than for some time past, prognosticators declare.

When 5 o'clock came the secretary's office staff was swamped, and the official list of candidacies was not available for some time. At that time it appeared 875 had filed for office, at least fifty more than ran for position two years ago. Dave O'Hara, chief election clerk, was too busy to compute comparisons, however.

One of the upsets in early political dope was the filing of J. E. Bennett, state senator from Multnomah county. Bennett at first announced he would run for congress, but yesterday his filing read for reelection to the state senate. Bennett, in a statement, said too many had already filed for congress with the support of personal, selfish interests.

As far as could be ascertained, only one filing which republican leaders expected and looked for, was missing—that of delegate to the national republican convention from eastern Oregon. There probably will be several other vacancies to be discovered later. Yet the sticker is still available, and probably will be used in some instances.

It's hard to judge value on first sight
DON'T RELY ON SHOP-WINDOW APPEARANCE
You don't judge a tire by the tread. Whether they're good for 13,000 or 33,000 miles, they look much alike when they're new. Especially with clothing, it's hard to judge value by first appearance. Then avoid the mistake, and the later disappointment, of selecting a suit of unknown make.
Don't rely on shop-window appearance. Don't put faith in mere claims. Depend on a Kuppenheimer suit, famous for thorough quality and dependability for 57 years. Tempered fabrics, hand-crafting assure that this suit will keep its original style through months of constant use. Think this over: no regrets ever followed the purchase of a Kuppenheimersuit. They're not high priced, in fact, you pay no more than the cost of ordinary clothes.
