

PROBE MADE IN D'JARDIN CASE

Parents to Confer Today With Official, Likely To File Charges

The victim, however, was not the only youth to suffer in the fray. Several of his assailants, among them at least one prominent athlete, yesterday bore conspicuous bruises and abrasions about their faces. Witnesses to DeJardin's capture, said the lad put up a strong fight and was landed in the automobile only with great difficulty. There he attempted to kick out the windows, as he is said to have done successfully during a previous abduction.

The 10 youths are generally held to be members of the "J. C." or "Julius Caesars" secret society. Near the high school yesterday, a crowd of 25 to 30 boys gathered and engaged in a warm discussion. Prominent students claimed these were members of the same organization. Society Influenced In Sports Talked While feeling against the offense was strong among the students, it was in an undercurrent. On the surface, the students were for the most part quiet about the affair.

Many expressed the opinion that the long-gossiped influence of secret societies in athletics would now be destroyed. It has been rumored repeatedly that boys not members of the societies have no chance to attain positions on the school's teams. DeJardin, himself, an outstanding athlete with a good record at Parrish junior high school, did not play on the football team last fall. He participated in basketball as a member of the second squad.

Other members of the school board yesterday declared that they would not countenance any such rowdiness as DeJardin claims to be the cause of.

Mrs. R. S. Keene said she did not favor suspension. "A suspended boy just loads around and gets into further trouble," she said. "I would be in favor of taking away their credits and forbidding them to participate in athletics. Why forbid a secret society student to hold office and then permit him to play ball?"

Immediate action and suspension of all athletic activities for the balance of this year was the verdict of Director F. E. Neer. Directors Mark D. McCallister and E. L. Weider favored a thorough investigation and appropriate punishment.

TRAINMEN KILLED IN OHIO SMASHUP

PORTSMOUTH, O., April 21.—(AP)—(Thursday)—Two trainmen were killed and a mail clerk injured early today in a wreck of a Norfolk & Western passenger and express train about 15 miles east of here.

Two express cars and the locomotive overturned after leaving the tracks, two coaches, one pullman car, and one mail car were derailed.

Railroad men here expressed the belief unidentified persons had tampered with the tracks.

The train was No. 4, bound from Cincinnati to Norfolk, Va. Several other trains were held up by the wreckage.

The two killed were Engineer J. H. Myers and Fireman J. J. Kemp, both of Portsmouth. Railroad men said the only other victim was the injured mail clerk, whose name was not immediately learned.

CORNET AND CURL COIFFURE

One of women's knottiest problems is how to arrange the growing glory in the most becoming manner. Here, Dorothy Jordan, screen actress, gives her version of the ideal coiffure. It is a combination of braid, wave and curl. The braid forms a halo around the head, coming down the left side over the ear and pinned back on the right side. The soft ringlet line softens the kinks of the neck and adds femininity to the face.

U. S. CITIZENS IN ONE-POUND PACKETS

With the announcement that a one-pound baby had been born to Mrs. William St. John, of Kansas City, Mo., news continues to come in from various parts of the United States of similar instances of tiny Americans making their debut to the Land of the Free. The St. John baby, as far as the little is concerned, is a "wonder" because it is larger than a man's head. No time was taken to post it on the scale, but its weight is estimated at one and one-half pounds. It was rushed right into the incubator where it is doing well, feeding itself with the aid of a special contrivance. Doctors say it has every chance of growing into a big, healthy citizen. Last year there were two babies in the Atlantic City, N. J., incubator at the same time whose total weight was less than five pounds. Both could have been comfortable not to had in a week's time of women class.

show up. Two years ago, when this was brought up, regular complaints were filed and the arrested persons were brought in. The police department is not responsible for this condition, however, declared Chief Frank Minto. Declares Poulson Keeps All Tags "I don't know how I could do anything about it," he said. "He (Poulson) keeps the tags in his office. Any time he gives us a list of them, we'll go and get them." The cases investigated by Auditor Davison dealt entirely with automobile parking in violation of the regulations. "A large per cent of the 'tickets' have not been checked with the record of ownership," he reported. "So it was not possible in a short space of time to classify the offenders." His tabulation of offenses which have not been disposed of is as follows:

Violation	1930-31	1932	Total
Overline parking	5035	497	5532
Parking 20 feet or more	1	1	2

TUMALO DISTRICT FINANCING BACKED

Plans for refinancing the Tumalo municipal improvement district, formerly known as the Tumalo irrigation district, has been accepted by the bondholders committee of the project. It was announced Wednesday at the office of C. E. Stricklin, state engineer.

The district is located in Deschutes county and originally contained approximately 16,000 acres of irrigable lands. This has now been reduced to 9,000 acres, because of inadequate water.

Under the refinancing plan the irrigation district will pay to the bondholders $9000 annually for a period of 50 years. During the first five years of this period $6,000 will be returned annually to the district for rehabilitation of the irrigation works.

The annual payment plan is equivalent to $260,000 of refunding bonds, drawing four per cent interest annually. The refunding bonds will be issued under what is known as the limited liability act.

Strickland said the plan was one of the most logical adopted in connection with the refinancing of any irrigation project in the state.
