

Spiritual Needs Are Emphasized

That the spiritual needs of children together with the means of building character should be emphasized in connection with child health is the opinion expressed by the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, D.D., of New York city. "Today, on National Child Health day we would do well to consider one phase of child life which recent events have brought forcibly to our attention," says Dr. Fosdick. "There are in this country, we are told by those who are studying the problem, 'midget' organizations of children six and seven years old who are receiving their first training for a life of crime, and there are 'junior' organizations of boys in their teens who are already part way through their apprenticeship for a criminal career. How much more evidence of this sort will the nation need before it takes more seriously its responsibility for teaching children that which is good and healthful in other than physical realms?"

Citizens the country over are agreed on the necessity of giving children the best physical care. It is time now that they agreed on helping children to build character. A sense of responsibility to neighbors and to society, on the part of the grown man or woman and an appreciation of that which is just, are qualities which result from years of training. They have their beginning in early childhood in the way the small boy or girl is taught to act in daily relationships with other members of the family and with playmates.

Fund for Health Is Appropriated

"Probably the most outstanding fact in relation to child health in Oregon, this past year, was the passage of appropriation bills for continuation of county public health nursing and school health nursing services. To hold fast to the machinery which has been set up during past years was a challenge which has been successfully met," says Mrs. Saldie Orr Dunbar, executive secretary, Oregon Tuberculosis association, and chairman, department of public welfare, General Federation of Women's Clubs, in reporting recent developments in Oregon child health work.

Mrs. Dunbar points out that in this state particularly May day has been used effectively both to review child health and child welfare programs and to launch new projects in child health work. Parents are being helped to do a better job of bringing up their children, says Mrs. Dunbar, by placing them in contact with the best scientific knowledge, by creating and maintaining adequate health machinery through a community educational program, safeguarding the integrity of the home and placing within reach of the parents available resources of information.
