End not Expected; no Funeral Plans are Announced yet

Gale S. Hill, 54, judge of the third Oregon judicial district, composed of Marion and Linn counties, died at 10 p. m. last night at the Portland Medical hospital. The judge had been in the hospital for more than two months under specialists' care. His condition grew steadily worse and for the last four days he had been in a state of coma. Death is thought to have been caused by a caneer of the pancreas. Funeral arrangements had not been made late last night, Judge Hill was compelled to relinquish his duties in department two of the court here and at Albany about two months ago when he went to Portland for medical observation. It became known here recently that his condition was critical and that Albany physicians who had conferred about his condition, had sent him to specialists in Portland with the hope that their difect a remedy to the disorders which afflicted the judge.

A man who in normal weighed 250 pounds, the judge's weight steadily declined. Last week he was reported to have fallen to 160 pounds. Throughout the many weeks the judge has been in the Portland hospital, a succession of fellow attorneys, him. The judge maintained his cheery, genial attitude almost unwould not be long until he was back at work and remarked jecularly about the number of physiians who had attended him.

Judge Hill was born in Albany November 11, 1877, and was the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Hill, His father was an outstanding man in the medical practice of his day. Judge Hill received his early education in the public schools of Linn county, and was graduated from Albany college in 1897. Later Mr. Hill read law in the offices of Weatherford & Wyatt in Albany and then with his uncle, W. Lair Hill of Oakland, Cal. He was admitted to the Oregon bar in 1900 and since that date practiced law steadily in Albany, until he was appointed judge of the circuit court in district three, September 20, 1930, by Governor A.
