Flophouse Boss Leaves—Frod Clark, Grays Harbor logger who during the winter and spring served as superintendent of the city hall flophouse for Chief of Police Minto, took his leave yesterday to go in search of work. He said he had no special destination but that he hoped to earn a few dollars somewhere. J. G. "Jack" Bullard, who served as flophouse cook during the winter, has obtained a job at a local lunch counter. Both men kept the flophouse residents in order and checked-up on "repeaters" for the police chief. They served without pay.

Old-Timers to Picnic—Salem's "old timers" will gather in Willson park on Sunday, June 19, for their annual picnic. Arthur Moore, general chairman, announced yesterday. Because of its central location, Willson park has been chosen as the picnic site instead of the state fairgrounds as in the past. Fred Lockley, one time Salem postmaster and now Portland newspaper man, will be among the picnic speakers. Chairman Moore will select his committee this week.

Hear Mocking Bird—A rarity in this section, the song of a pair of mocking birds, was heard at their Polk county home by Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Crawford, she said while here yesterday. The birds were heard during the night, and as late as 4 o'clock in the morning. The cry was quite shrill, she said. Mocking birds make their home in much warmer climates than this, and it is supposed the ones heard by the Crawfords simply are paying this section a visit, attempting, possibly, to see whether the depression of the south is duplicated here.

Under the Dome...

TWELVE good reasons were set out by the state board of higher education against the proposed initiative measure to consolidate the physical properties of the five institutions of higher learning. The reasons stressed were economy effect of agitation on future education and the housing situations.

The board stated that under the present plan, it could effect a saving of about $2,000,000 in the institutions next year, while the other plan as proposed for the ballot, would not only eliminate the saving but would necessitate appropriation of more millions for additional buildings at Corvallis.

Further the board pointed out the outstanding indebtedness which would have to be assumed by the state, the fraternity and sorority problem, and the abandonment of such valuable property by removal. Perusal of the reasons set forth in a story published in this paper may enlighten many who are ignorant of the immensity of the proposal.

Perhaps the state fair will not be abandoned after all. Max Gehlhar said yesterday he would recommend to the board of agriculture here the fair be continued, and he will present plans whereby it can be operated without a deficit. He declares his plans would not handicap exhibits nor exhibitors.

But in his letter to the budget director Gehlhar did indicate the dropping of the horse show or the racing program or both. The matter of course is up to the board, and these are difficult times, but what would a fair be without horse races? That feature dates way back to the old-time fairs.

Only one state in the union, says a report completed by Hal E. Hoop, has a lower maximum for traveling expenses allowed state officials and employees than Oregon. That is South Carolina. Its maximum is $3.50 a day, while this state's is $3.65 as recently revised by the board of control.

Hal has received reports from all of the states on various phases

ARE YOU FORTY?

If you are, perhaps your eyes are crying out for extra help when you read fine print. Have your eyes examined. Then, if bifocals will help you, ask us about the new type that is so much more comfortable for your eyes—the modern, Ful-vue bifocal, that reduces the uncomfortable "jump" of vision found in ordinary bifocals and avoiding "rainbows" before your eyes.

Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government of expenditures which he was instructed to do by the last legislature and which will be submitted by Hoop to the 1933 session. The report also shows that Oregon is one of eight states allowing the lowest maximum for mileage on private cars, five cents a mile.

Well, the National Guard has declared another war, his annual encounter at Camp Clatsop. While 5000 guards will train for the scene of action June 14, the actual combat will not be staged until June 25. People apparently like this war as about 40,000 usually go to see the sight.

And what these Oregon boys won't eat before the big conflict. A glance at the menu makes one wonder how they can get such appetites. For instance they will consume 4000 pounds of beans, the usual army vegetable, 40,000 pounds of potatoes, 20,000 loaves of bread, 27,000 chickens and about 61,000 pounds of different kinds of meat.

The great war, General White points out, will be at the expense of the federal government, and these boys will be well cared for, and no casualties are customary nor expected. The encampment costs about $200,000 for which money is already on hand, the general says. And the boys like their annual vacation.

The big flower show is not the only excitement witnessed on the state house grounds the past few days. Yesterday some squirrels had a lot of hard luck. A swarm of bees visited the grounds and ran the squirrels out of their hole in the linden tree on the east grounds. Another swarm were busy in the tents on the west side grounds.

Mrs. Florence Bell, among other things telegraph puncher at the state capitol for the Oregonian, left for the beach on a weekend outing. Her usual substitute from the state police department was likewise out of the city, so Joy Locke, Associated Press operator, pinch hit yesterday for her.

Yesterday was the last day in which statements of candidates as to how much they spent in their pre-primary campaigns could be filed with the secretary of state. Totalling all reports it looks as though the most was spent for Frederick Steier for U. S. Senator, more than $11,000, the next largest for A. E. Clark, defeated for the senatorial nomination by Steier, at more than $12,000 and Jack N. Harde for state senator from Portland, at about $5000.

CANNERY LOSER IN SUIT ON CONTRACT

A verdict calling for payment of $1171 as by Libby, McNeill and Libby to Karl Heusser, plaintiff, was returned in circuit court here Saturday afternoon. The suit involved a contract for cucumbers to be delivered in 1931 by the plaintiff to the defendant company, C. Genevieve Morgan, foreman of the grand jury, signed the verdict.

The case was held of special moment because 150 other cucumber dealers had signed similar contracts. A number of these men were in court to hear the testimony.

Heusser claimed the company had graded his cucumbers below scale while the defendant concerned claimed the grading was done according to contract. The jury was out about four hours.

Appeal of the case is expected. A number of strawberry growers were in the courtroom during the trial as well as the superintendent of another packing company, the suit being considered one which might have a bearing on
