

DALLAS VOTES ON BONDS AGAIN

Second Amendment Proposed Appointment of Auditor and Judge

DALLAS, June 4.—A special election will be held Monday, June 6, in order to submit two amendments to the city charter to the voters of Dallas. Polls will be open from 8 a. m. to 3 p. m. The first amendment will authorize the issuance of bonds, not to exceed $22,000 for the purpose of building a new city hall. The site for the proposed city hall is the old county jail lot at the corner of Jefferson and Court streets.

This building would be a two-story structure with a basement under the greater part. The floor space would be 80x28 feet. It would be used to house the city administration offices, the city council, the fire trucks and street cleaning equipment, and would provide public rest rooms for men and women, club rooms for the fire department, rooms for a night driver, and a public auditorium.

The erection of such a building would do away with the rental charges of approximately $700 a year for the housing of the fire apparatus and street cleaning equipment. The council and mayor estimated that a 1-mill tax levy would be sufficient to take care of the bond issue. They have taken the stand that this is a logical time to build as both the price of labor and materials are lower. Local labor and material would be used as far as possible if the building is authorized.

The bonds which the council plans to issue are of the serial type and would be retired at the rate of one-twentieth of the issue each year. The council plans, if the bond issue is authorized, to proceed with the construction of the building as soon as the bonds can be sold and a contract for the structure let.

The second amendment to the charter provides for the changing of the office of city auditor and police judge from an elective office by the people to an appointive one by the council. This is the only city office aside from the mayor and council which is elective. The auditor and police judge is elected every year at the regular city election while the other city officers are appointed at the first meeting of the council each year.

Any voter who is regularly registered may vote at the city election and the election rules are the same as apply at the regular elections. The four election boards have agreed to serve without pay for this election. The polling places for the special election are as follows: first Dallas, city hall; second Dallas, court house; third Dallas, water office; fourth Dallas, Ed C. Dunn residence.

EUGENE ENVOYS TO COME HERE

Compromise, Perhaps Board Shakeup, is Considered; Official is Silent

(Continued from page 1) day with a statement that the budget could be balanced by curtailing certain activities of the fair and cutting down expenses. The hint of the fair's continuance brought quick opposition from the Marion Jersey Cattle club and the Salem chamber of commerce, the latter acting informally as the fair matter has not come to its board of directors.

Statehouse aides: James W. Mott is back at his corporation commissioner's desk, avowedly "worn out" from his campaign. Mott will continue at his present job until he goes to congress, provided he can win next November over Harvey Starkweather of Gladstone. Mott will campaign with the same energy for election as he did for the nomination.

While a moratorium on license payments effective until August 1 has not been declared, one is confidently expected. Governor Meier is hard-pressed to give any reason that payments should be made sooner in 1932 than they were in 1931 when a 30-day grace period was allowed motorists. License fee collections have been slow thus far at the auto division of the secretary of state's office.

The defeat of Alfred E. Clark was embarrassing to Henry Hanson and to the governor, the former having actively helped Clark manage his campaign and the latter having endorsed him throughout the state in view of the divided field against Stawler. Meier's endorsement seems a political mistake; clearly the issue was not Meier's strength but the relative strength of the incumbent senator, the wet candidacy of Stanfield and the uninspirational contest of Clark. The Meier forces, nevertheless, feel Clark's defeat was a rebuff to them.

For weeks the department of higher education has been impudently divulging the faculty lists in the various schools for 1932-1933. Excuse after excuse has been offered why these were not available. Now the lists are being released in carefully prepared press statements issued at periodic intervals. Getting information from the board of higher education is about as hard an assignment as a statehouse reporter can be given.

The total dormitory capacity on the Corvallis campus is now 850 students. The fraternity and sorority capacity is 1,225 students.

DRIVER IS KILLED IN HIGHWAY CRASH

No relatives of Leo H. Anderson, 43-year-old auto parts dealer of West Salem, who died as the result of an automobile accident yesterday morning, had been located last night. The body was being held at the Rigdon mortuary. While driving on the Pacific highway four miles north of Salem, Anderson went to sleep, it is believed. The car careened off the right side of the roadway, ran along 80 feet, then crossed to the left side and crashed into a power line pole. When the police arrived at 6:15 a. m., Anderson, in a serious condition, had been removed from his car by persons from that vicinity. He died in a hospital about an hour later.

Reduction of wages of employees in the state printing plant is another economy sought by Henry M. Hansen, director, in his campaign to balance the state budget.

In a letter to Governor Meier Saturday, Hansen inquired as to what action had been taken on a proposal last December calling for reductions to conform to the scale paid by Salem newspapers. In the absence of any member of the printing board, E. C. Hobbs, state printer and secretary of the board, said no action had been taken on the proposal. The state pays printers $42 to $45 per week as compared to $36 to $39 paid by the newspapers.
