Frisco doesn't know whether the league will go through the season, but if it does, it will use three traveling umpires and pick up a "home boy" in each town who will work for next to nothing and require no traveling expenses-and Frisco, as one of the new umpires in the league, was one of those who had to go. He didn't actually get his walking papers, but was just advised by the president of the league that there wasn't much hope, Frisco brought along an excellent letter of recommendation stating that he is competent to call 'em in any

Where are the two bit pieces coming to buy baseball ducats? They're not coming. Players' salaries have been cut, teams cut to 14 men, and still they lost money every day.

So if anybody's looking for a good catcher-only Frisco has a notion he may stick to umpiring, where there's sure to be a few dollars if he gets any work. -0-
