WILLIAMS CHOSEN SEATTLE OFFICIAL

Former Salem man Placed On Park Board; Heads Important Work

Carle F. Williams, for many years a resident of Salem, has been named upon the Seattle park board in connection with the reorganization now being made by the new mayor, John F. Dore. He was named chairman of the 200 committees of the park board. Mr. Williams was for a long period connected with The Statesman organization, part of the time as editor and manager of the Northwest Poultry Journal. He has worked in similar lines in Seattle, including advertising and printing.

The Seattle park board has exclusive supervision of all parks, boulevards, golf courses, play fields and swimming beaches, and in 1931-32 had a budget of $800,000.

Employees in the park department of Seattle number into the hundreds, with a payroll the past year of approximately $490,000. Under the new administration these figures are to be cut nearly in half. At the first meeting of the new board $27,500 in salaries were cut out of the budget for the coming year. And this is just a beginning.

Seattle parks, squares and places number more than 60, playgrounds over the city number 34, with many bathing beaches for the public, as well as several beautiful golf links. The operation and maintenance of all these is under the direction supervision of the park board. The zoo, located in Woodland Park houses hundreds of animals brought together from many climes; birds, snakes, lions, leopards, elephants, deer, elk and many peculiar specimens with more peculiar names.

Wayne Pettit is back someplace in Oregon after visiting in San Francisco and enjoying the Eureka earthquake. At least he was here late Wednesday night, left a note at the press room and continued on his vacation. He will be back Sunday night to resume his Oregonian duties.

State Senator Isaac E. Staples was here from Portland yesterday, as was also Major "Scootie" Dutton of the Oregon National Guard. They probably heard Salem was enjoying summer weather and came down to find out what it was. Both were seen with certain high army officials of Salem at luncheon.

Enrollment at the Jason Lee daily vacation bible school yesterday rolled up to 175 boys and girls, the largest yet recorded and far beyond expectations of the leaders.

So large are the classes that five additional assistants have been secured to aid in the instruction and recreation of the children: Miss Helen Fletcher, Miss Katherine Barker, Miss Eunice Packard, Miss Wilma Godsey and Miss Gatha Bressler.

The school opened Monday for a three-week period, with classes held each morning from 9 o'clock to noon. Registrations will not be accepted after this week.

ANY hopes for a moratorium on new automobile license plates were frustrated yesterday. A dispatch from Portland said the governor did not expect to issue a 30-day delay in new licenses. They are due July 1, and Secretary of State Hal E. Hoss said he had his increased staff ready to handle the demands.

Early license applications this year show a marked decrease over previous years. Hoss said. This he believed partly due to rumors of a 30-day extension. From now on he expects the sale of plates to start heavily. Well, that's another item to consider in this month's budget.

Al Lindbeck, the dean of the capitol press room and correspondent for the Oregon Journal the rest of the time, is already bemoaning lack of rain. The first hot day of summer, in fact about the only day of summer finds Al out waiting for cooler weather and some rain. This time, Al, we hope you are disappointed.

All the women at least at the University of Oregon are live ones. This was indicated by a query received recently by the secretary of state asking Hoss if there was a law against obtaining female cadavers. The query from the university stated they had enough male cadavers but could not get any one of the other sex.

The unusual query came from the professor of sociology at the university, who wanted the bodies for class study. Hoss replied that while he didn't have any such corpses around his office, there was no law prohibiting him from obtaining same, that is if he obtained them without resorting to murder.

Probably the reason for the query was that at one time some women's organizations protested the use by medical schools of unclaimed female cadavers. However the principal point in the query was the statement that women seem to be more in demand than men, even after they are dead.

Hoss got a chance to swear the other day. He says this is now because he usually gets sworn at. He swore in Otto R. Hartwig as a member of the state industrial commission. Hartwig is already on the job and yesterday reported that so far he thinks he will like it very much. Hartwig is well known here as he was formerly president of the state federation of labor.
