More of Silver Creek Falls Are Accessible Now

Never before have all the falls in the Silver Creek falls area been so accessible to the public as now, J. D. Drake, Silverton photographer, reported here yesterday while in the city on business. During the past winter the state has improved trails throughout the park area and the middle north fork group of falls may now all be easily reached. Heretofore most sightseers at the falls have only viewed the upper and lower south falls, the north falls and the upper north falls. In the lower and middle north fork group are several of the prettiest falls in the park. Drake reports. About 750 strangers from all parts of the state saw the falls last week.

M'CALLUM TELLS OF AFRICAN WILDS

New Pastor at Court Street Church of Christ is Widely Traveled

From the lands of South Africa, where he accidentally beheld a spectacle few whites have seen—a hunt conducted by the Zulus to the city of Salem, whose very name means peace, comes Hugh N. McCallum, new pastor of the Court Street Church of Christ. McCallum went into South Africa in 1926, hunting for bigger game than even that of the buffalo and wildebeest—his hunt was for souls that needed saving. For most of five years he worked as minister of a Christian church in Bokburg, a city of 20,000 white persons in the center of the gold mining district, and 16 miles from Johannesburg, another and larger center of white population.

On one of several big-game hunting expeditions into the Zulu land, McCallum and his party accidentally ran across a hunt conducted by the Zulus, the most majestic and best blooded of the African tribes. Savages appear in full war regalia.

In the terminology of the mining region, boys were men from the age of 16 to 60. Native "boys" are employed largely in the mines, as many as 2000 in one mine. With each 10 or 12 natives worked a white miner or supervisor.

If tribal warfare flared up among the mine workers—and on Sundays that might often happen—white policemen quickly put an end to the trouble. McCallum had high praise for the police forces in Africa, the system being on the basis of state police.

The Zulus still preserve another distinguishing characteristic from the other native tribes: they respect the virtue of woman, though polygamy is not uncommon.

Government and mission schools have done much to lessen tribal customs, and at one center a Christian college is well attended. Natives so educated are beginning to take over the work of passing on to their own education.

Rev. McCallum and family returned from Africa last December, and held evangelistic services here, at Seattle, Newberg and Tillamook before accepting the pulpit here the first of June, and moving to 1744 Chemeketa street here.

McCallum children also know Africa. The family includes Mrs. M-with the Zulu, for their servants were of this race. Too, there were many of them in Bokburg, just as there were natives of other tribes. They're "Boys" up To Sixty Years Old.

WATER SYSTEM AT OCEANSIDE IS PLAN

Boys who attended the Y. M. C. A. camp at Oceanside last year will vouch for the worth of having running water piped into the camp kitchen this year. Boy's Secretary Adams and E. A. Besch, building superintendent, are going to the camp today to lay out the new water system, plan making the camp ready for the boys, and arrange for food supplies.

The new water system will include hot water in the kitchen. Last year the boys by turns carried water a considerable distance from the spring. The camp will open on July 12.

OFFICIALS TO MAKE TABERNACLE VISIT

Rev. S. Swanson, northwest district superintendent of the Assemblies of God, and Executive Presbyter J. W. Welch from the national headquarters, will speak ing. Representatives of the Portland livestock yards explained the procedure followed in the sale of stock.

here tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Evangelistic tabernacle at 13th and Ferry streets. They come here direct from Seattle where during the past week they conducted the annual northwest district convention of the church. Rev. C. G. Weston, pastor at the tabernacle, who was at the convention with a number of others from Salem, says: "The convention was, in my opinion, the greatest we have had in the northwest district, setting a high mark of progress for the past year and taking measures for greater advances in the immediate future. This session, as former ones, was a spiritual feast as well, marked with a beautiful harmony and optimistic outlook."

No Question About It

they are Milder!

YOU'RE RIGHT . . . there's one thing that stands out about Chesterfield. That is . . . they're Milder.
This means Chesterfields aren't harsh. It means they're not strong or heavy.
Early in the day or late at night you'll find that Chesterfields are always pleasing. They are mild and yet they satisfy.
What's more they taste better, too. That's it . . . milder and better taste. These are the two outstanding merits of Chesterfield.
Plus . . . a third important advantage. Chesterfields are as pure as the water you drink . . . as pure as science can make them.
