WEST SALEM, July 26—Street improvements were discussed at a taxpayers' meeting, called by the city council Saturday night, and over which presided Earl Patton. The taxpayers' meeting followed a short session of the council, at which County Engineer Larson explained the work being done on Wallace road.

The taxpayers instructed the council to rescind its previous action in regard to street oiling, in which bids were let, and asked that a skin coat oiling job be done instead.

After the taxpayers adjourned, the councilmen reconvened and rescinded the bids for oiling, then empowering the street committee to hire the necessary work done with cooperation of the county engineer.

Members of the street committee, Fred Gibson, Harry J. Carter, G. V. Meyers, George J. Chapman, will assist and direct the work, which will be done by the county, and paid for by the city. Preliminary work started Monday, and it is expected that the actual surfacing will be begun by Thursday morning and will last only a few days.

Streets to be surfaced now will probably be McNary, Gerth, Kingwood and Rosemont, those used by the bus, and those most needing it.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald C. Larkin, who have been operating the Auto camp and service station belonging to Hawkins and Roberts situated on Edgewater street for the past year or so, are closing the place and moving to 344 18th street N. W. The Wild Wood Court in Salem, and will open real estate offices in the D'Arcy building. The family moved the first of the week. The camp and station will be closed until sold.
