SCHOOLS TO OPEN ON SEPTEMBER 19
Early Registration in High Urged; Registration to Be About Normal

Diminishing hours of daylight and the approach of September are bringing the shadow of the schoolhouse nearer home to Salem children every day. In 23 more days they will find that shadow beckoning them toward classroom doors. School is scheduled to begin in the grade and high schools on September 19.

Enrollment at Salem high school is expected to remain up to last year's figure, since the school board recently ruled that tuition-paying pupils shall be admitted as before, despite some threat of the district's not receiving the tuition money. Principal Fred D. Wolf is urging all new students to register as soon as possible in order that the class schedules may be completed before the opening of school. The office is open each week day. Departmental heads will start to work a week from Tuesday.

The usual number of beginners are expected in the grade schools, according to Carriotta Crowley, elementary supervisor. Children who become six years old before November 15 may enroll in the first grade this fall; those reaching six before next April 1 may start in the spring semester. Under-aged children may be admitted if they can pass a rigid mental and physical examination under direction of Miss Crowley.

No major improvements have been made in Salem school plants this year and only a minimum of refinishing has been done. Chief of the latter is the calcimining of classrooms and painting of the music room at Garfield school. New step boards have been installed on the east flight at the high school and the hall floors have been reconditioned.

Following its meeting yesterday, the commission members might just as well have stuck around because another big meeting has been set for next Wednesday in Portland. At this meeting more than three-quarters million dollars worth of work will be awarded, including some more of the Pacific highway north of here.

Hop picking season is approaching. This was indicated more than ever yesterday when many women with young girls inquired around the capitol where they might secure permits allowing their children to work. The state labor commissioner has been besieged of late by women and girls asking permits.

Under the Dome
 Occurrence of Gossip
 Occurs at the Government

Henry M. Hansen, who has been in western Oregon and western Idaho on business and vacation, returned to the scene of activity here late Thursday, but yesterday returned to Portland for a conference with the governor, Beatrice Walton, secretary to the governor, likewise was in Portland.

So far the day has passed without any new developments in the Holman-Elmsig situation, other than a liberal discussion of different phases of the recent incidents in virtually every state department. These comments unfortunately are made at the expense of almost all parties involved, none escaping the banter.

In a Portland dispatch it was stated yesterday that the governor for the moment had nothing to say over the flareup here but that when the proper time came he would issue a statement. The governor doesn't know exactly when he would return to his desk at Salem, and Hoes perhaps will be absent another week.

Stayton has the lowest bonded indebtedness of any town of its size in the state and has no special tax levy.
