GALLIPOLI STORY HEARD BY ROTARY

A gripping story of the fighting on the Gallipoli peninsula during the world war was told by Lieut. Jim L. Parsons at the Rotary club luncheon yesterday.

Parson served with the Australian troops all through the war, was wounded and cited for gallantry. Gallipoli was not a failure, said Parsons. It was conceived to relieve the pressure on Russia and on Egypt and was not expected to effect the capture of Constantinople.

Parsons told of the landing at Anzac cove, the fight to gain a foothold there, the shelling his forces underwent, and their final evacuation. For eight weeks the men were deprived of more than the smallest ration of water, and literally "dried up" for lack of liquid.

INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE NOT BACKING SCRIP

The Salem Industrial league has no connection with proposals to circulate general "scrip" in the community was the assertion of John M. Clifford, one of the directors of the league yesterday.

"Our organization has issued scrip or produce certificates but this has been for labor and is redeemable from products in the warehouse at face value," said Clifford. "Our paper is backed by the actual goods in the warehouse and in that respect is like a warehouse receipt. The issuance of scrip which is not redeemable any place is not the proposal of the league."

R. A. Harris, who has been active in promoting relief work, has taken the lead individually in getting merchants and others to agree to accept scrip whose value would all be extinguished in a limited period of time.

Certificate of Sheriff's Sale Reported Lost

In a report by Blaine McCord, city attorney of Woodburn, filed in an affidavit with the county clerk, he states that a certificate given in return for some lots sold by Sheriff Bower to the city of Woodburn, has been lost by the city.

McCord says that the certificate was delivered to him and that he turned it over to the city recorder. Now it cannot be found although a lengthy search has been made through all the papers.

McCord states that he is filing the affidavit mainly for the purpose of obtaining a sheriff's deed to the property anyhow.

A meeting will be held in the Multnomah county armory on Monday evening which will be attended by post commanders when further details and instruction relative to the parade will be presented by the parade marshal.
