TUITION CASE IS SET AHEAD

Plaintiff Claims due law Process not Allowed To Taxpayers

Determination of constitutional status of the 1915 Oregon high school tuition law now rests with the seven members of the state supreme court who Monday morning here heard two hours of oral argument from counsel of both sides in the litigation.

The case involved, Weinacht against Bower, carried on appeal from Judge L. G. Lewelling's decision, was advanced on the court's docket to enable an early decision.

Meanwhile all high schools in the state are affected and plans for the 1932-1933 year cannot be completed until the various districts know whether they will receive tuition payments this year from out-of-district students.

Contention of the plaintiff and appellant, represented by Roy F. Shields of Portland, centered on the alleged fact that the high school tuition law did not allow due process of law to the taxpayer and did not allow equal protection of the law, both necessitated by constitutional grounds.

Shields said the non-high school district taxpayer would not appeal or appear from the tax levied annually on all non-high school district taxpayers. He characterized the existing law as one providing for "taxation without representation."

Cost Item Scored
Counsel for the appellant scored the alleged practice of high school districts to include items of interest on debt and interest on the school plant investment as costs. Through the determination of these items, in themselves based on valuations which Shields said were matters of judgment, the high school district had created costs unfair to the tuition taxpayer. He characterized school clerks who prepared the statement of "school costs" as men, partisan in outlook, necessarily hearing "their masters' voices."

Custer E. Ross and Walter C. Winslow, representing the defendant, held that the right of due process of law and its equal protection was afforded in the tuition taxpayer by the right of court action when a delinquent tax certificate comes up for foreclosure. The case of First National bank against Kendall was cited by both sides, defense contending the state supreme court had there ruled that a taxpayer's right to defend himself against a delinquent tax foreclosure constituted due process of law. Mr. Shields held the case not in print since it involved a specific charge of this state forestry department on one piece of land for a single service and could not be held analogous to the tuition tax applying to a group of taxpayers.

Busses are Blamed
Counsel for the defense said the tuition tax law was justified under the state's constitution, making provisions of educational legislation mandatory on the state legislature. Increasing costs to non-high school districts were explained to the court as coming from the great increase of tuition-paying students in high schools and the growing use of bus transportation.

Mr. Ross told the court that 1200 student in Marion county were being availing themselves of education through the school tuition tax and the support for this education came from $20,000,000 assessed value of property.

Counsel for appellant and respondent alike urged the court to hand down an oral opinion before its written opinion was finished, if possible, in order to expedite the opening of high school in many districts. Briefs for both sides have already been submitted.

They are not present in Luckies ... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.
