THREATENS HUNGER STRIKE

MAYOR TERRENCE MACSWINEY
MAHATMA GANDHI
Courting death by starvation as a political weapon of the oppressed is not by any means new in history. Mahatma Gandhi, India's spiritual leader, in his determination to starve himself to death as a protest against the new British electoral plan for India, has seized upon a means of passive protest which dates back at least as far as the Spanish Inquisition. Many of the oppressed in medieval Spain undertook voluntary starvation in protest against the tyranny that prevailed in those bygone days. More recently, the self-martyrdom of Lord Mayor Terrence MacSwiney of Cork attracted the attention and sympathy of the entire world to the Irish cause. MacSwiney, sentenced to a two-year prison sentence for sedition against the British crown, went on hunger strike and steadfastly refused to touch food until his death after 74 days of suffering in Brixton Prison, London. Gandhi plans to start his self-starvation program if Premier Ramsay MacDonald does not rescind the electoral plan to which the Mahatma takes exception. However, MacDonald asserts that Gandhi would deprive the 60,000,000 "untouchables" he is supposed to champion of representation in the Indian Legislature and is determined to go ahead, regardless of the Mahatma's threats.
