DECLINE IS LESS, SMALL COLLEGES
Preliminary reports of fall enrollment in colleges throughout the United States shows clearly that small, independent colleges have suffered much smaller declines than the larger institutions. The situation is an altogether healthy one and reflects the growing trend to stronger, smaller schools of higher education.

Such was the message brought to Salem Ed club members Friday noon by Dr. Robert L. Kelly, secretary of the Association of American colleges. A threat to effective university work is "gigantism," Dr. Kelly said. America needs further to develop her smaller schools so leaders for "Main Street" need not be bundled off to the larger centers for their training.

Dr. Kelly paid tribute to the product of the smaller schools saying they were usually to be found among the leaders of their community. The last 18 years has seen a steady development of the independent colleges, he said. They have sought to impress the American public with the work they are doing but to give this publicity through the improvement of their own standards of operation. Dr. Kelly is in the city to attend the northwest conference of members of the national association.

YESTERDAY this column announced that Miss Margaret Davidson became a bride of a young man employed in the state highway department. No sooner had we arrived at the capitol yesterday than we learned our announcement was a little premature. She just announced she would wed him on November 10. We sort of unintentionally pulled a "Walter Winchell" on the young couple.

The state capitol might just as well declare a holiday today, as most of the officials are either gone now or are going. It appears the big game in Portland will attract the majority, while it will be an excuse for others. At any rate preliminary reports indicate the game will be well worth seeing.

And speaking of holidays, next week will see one holiday, the only one for the month, while in November there will be at least three. The one in October will be Columbus day, October 12, which is a state observance, so next Wednesday all state offices will be closed. The next month will see election day, Armistice day and Thanksgiving day.

And today is the last day upon which one may register to vote. Unless you have voted within the past two years, or have moved since your registration, you will find the election polls next November closed to you, and you will be refused your right to vote on the national, state, county or city candidates and issues.

Bert Bates, former Roseburg newspaperman, at the present the fun chief of the American Legion which he has been for many years, a cartoonist, piano player and general entertainer, was a visitor here yesterday. Bert was here in the interests of Senator Frederick Steiwer's campaign and he predicted a sparkling victory for the incumbent senator.

Another prominent Legionnaire was here yesterday. It was none other than Jack Mandamus Action Against Hal Hoss Refused Heffron

Judge L. G. Lewelling refused to mandamus Secretary of State Hoss yesterday to place the name of F. G. Heffron on the November ballot. The court's decision came after Heffron's counsel had argued his candidate had met the state's requirements. The court sustained the attorney-general's ruling that the time for filing for congressional offices closed September 12.

Heffron was nominated at Eugene by a convention held September 15. He intended to run as an independent candidate for congress in the first district.

EMMA EDER RITES SLATED FOR TODAY
GERVAIS, Oct. 7. — Mrs. Emma Eder, age 76, died suddenly at the home of her son, Henry, at 11:30 Wednesday night. Funeral services will be held from Sacred Heart church Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. Father Walsh officiating, and burial will be at the Catholic cemetery east of town.

Mrs. Eder was born in Wisconsin. Her husband, Andrew Eder, died in June, 1920. They came to Oregon by team five years ago and settled three miles east of town. Six sons and one daughter, all living in this section, survive. They are: Mrs. Mary Scheidler, Henry, Fred, Frank, Wenzel, John and George Eder.

Andrew Eder presented a good example of thrift. Coming to this country in pioneer days with an ox team and settling on grub land he forged ahead and as each son was married he was given a farm.

Martin, New AAA Manager, Takes Charge Locally
C. S. Martin, new district manager for the Three A automobile club, calls attention to the fact that the district AAA office here has merely been moved from the Marion hotel to the Eiker garage, and not discontinued. The change was made a few days ago, but despite announcements a number of members seem to be under impression the office has discontinued, Martin says.

Mr. Martin comes here from the Portland motor club office, succeeding Manager Frank B. Jones, who goes to Portland. Mr. Martin took over duties in this district October 1. He will be joined in another week by Mrs. Martin and their five-year-old daughter, when the home will be established here. He is in charge of the office at the Eiker garage, corner Ferry and South Liberty.

MUNICIPAL WATER PAYING AT DALLAS

Municipal operation of the water system is proving highly successful according to reports received yesterday from that city. Bond repayments of $4000, or twice the scheduled amount, have been made in the 11 months the city has owned the plant.

In addition revenues from the water system have been sufficient for the repayment to the general fund of $3500 advanced for legal work in connection with the taking over of the plant. In addition $1000 has been paid to install a chlorination plant and $1500 has been purchased for supplies. Two interest payments totaling $5300 have been made and the plant, with only 10 months of actual receipts to it, has $1000 on hand.

The plant was purchased from an individual who owned the system.

GRANGES FIGHTING FOR PET MEASURES
Granges in this section of Oregon have started fall work in earnest, and right now are particularly active in campaigning for two grange measures on the November ballot, the power measure and the oleomargarine bill, says Arthur Brown, western Oregon district deputy, who has just finished visitations to many of the granges in Marion, Yamhill, Washington and Clackamas counties. The grange is also actively interested in the proposed repeal of the Oregon bone dry law, and wherever he has visited, Mr. Brown has found the grange unanimous against repeal of the prohibition law. Tuesday of this week he attended the Yamhill Pomona grange sessions, and Friday night he appeared on the Red Hills booster program in the Liberty district. Today he will meet with Hope grange, in eastern Lincoln county.

Brown has been a Salem resident since coming here two months ago, moving here from Roseburg, where he served the southwestern Oregon section in his grange capacity. Now his district includes all of Oregon west of the Cascades.
