clerk should prepare one ballot and one only for use at the general election.

Judge McMahan said in his opinion the gist of the case was to determine whether the provisions of the state law or of the city ordinance should prevail in this situation.

Attorneys for both sides said they would prefer to have Judge McMahan take the case under advisement rather than to have him hand down an abrupt decision.

Should the supreme court demand writs of mandamus compelling the officials to proceed with the city election, question arose yesterday if City Recorder Poulson would be able to prepare legal notices of the election for all voters and be able to place them in the mails 10 days before election.

RIVER TERMINAL PLANS LAUNCHED

Ellis said, depended upon water service expansion. "Present facilities are sorely inadequate for present tonnage," Ellis averred, "resulting in unprofitable and expensive double-handling."

"River and harbor engineers now engaged in a survey of the Willamette river have stated that any report they may make favorable to river improvement will be conditioned upon local interests providing adequate water terminal facilities," Ellis stated.

"They also have indicated the extent of facilities needed and have provided tentative plans for such a terminal."

"Senator Charles L. McNary has indicated a belief locally that a construction of a six-foot channel will meet the approval of the board of army engineers and our chances for improvement are good. But we are told," Ellis continues, "that the construction of adequate terminal facilities by the community, or adequate assurance there, is a condition precedent to this river development."

Ellis said he had on mind a 200-foot wharf and transit shed which would provide approximately 40,000 square feet of floor space, with a suitable marine elevator. He said unit rates for dockage were to be provided.

Sight Members of Council Favorable

On the basis of a wood structure with galvanized iron siding, Ellis estimated the sub-structure would cost roughly $28,000 and the transit shed $12,000. Made of reinforced concrete and with a pier, Ellis estimated the terminal's cost at $85,000 to $100,000. Each of the eight members of the city council expressed himself as favorable to the plan provided no cost would fall upon the taxpayers' shoulders, that no monopoly would be created and that the holding company operating the terminal was to be a non-profit organization.

Henry Vandevort, councilman, agreed that a survey of city owned property along the waterfront should be made at once while William Ellis was directed to collaborate with City Attorney Trindle in presenting a resolution to the council meeting next Monday night, favoring the plan.

Meanwhile Ellis and Hamilton are to work out details of a lease with the Salem Navigation company which with the tentative land agreement, could form the basis for an application to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Councilmen at the meeting last night in addition to Mayor P. M. Gregory, were H. H. Vandevort, George W. Averett, Hal D. Patton, S. A. Hughes, F. E. Needham, Chris J. Kowitz, Watson Townsend and Dr. O. A. Olson. Chamber of commerce members included B. E. Sison, Douglas McKay, William P. Ellis, Lloyd A. Lee, W. M. Hamilton, C. E. Wilson, J. N. Chambers, U. S. Page, E. F. Skade and Grover Hillman.

"The team as a whole looked 100 per cent better," was the comment of Coach "Spec" Keene of Willamette in a message to The Statesman after Friday night's game. He stated that Olson, first string men still available, and the Bearcats were considered to be weaker than last year, especially with several of the regulars on the injured list. Some of these men forgot their injuries and starred in Friday night's contest.

Willamette was listed as the "under dog" in this game, since College of Idaho has all of its 1931 first string men still available, and the Bearcats were considered to be weaker than last year, especially with several of the regulars on the injured list. Some of these men forgot their injuries and starred in Friday night's contest.

BRIDGE IN GLACIER PARK WASHED OUT to bits. So strong was the force of the water, the river course was changed in several places below the structure and near the power plant left a foot bridge high and dry.

Paradise Inn was temporarily cut off by the water, leaving several guests and attendants stranded until a footbridge can be put up. Park officials were working on a temporary structure tonight and announced a wooden span for vehicles would be placed across the chasm as soon as possible for temporary use.

While workmen were attempting to put stringers across late in the afternoon for a footbridge, two more torrents of lesser size came down from the glacier, they reported, but its noise warned them in ample time to get to safety.

Heavy rains, swelling the streams that feed into the glacier and the giving way of a natural storage basin somewhere on the famous Nisqually ice field was believed by officials responsible for the water slide.

TRAIL DEDICATION IS TODAY, DALLES

One hundred faculty members and students from Willamette university will journey to The Dalles Saturday to take part in dedication ceremonies for the Oregon trail marker commemorating the establishment of the first Oregon mission among the Indians.

The main address at the dedication ceremonies starting at 1:30 o'clock will be given by Judge Charles H. Carey of Portland.

Other speakers will be P. J. Stadelman, representing Governor Meier; Robert A. Booth, of Eugene, and Ward Webber, president of The Dalles chamber of commerce. President Doney of Willamette will present the monument and the response will be given by Miss Celia Gavin, representing the city of The Dalles. Joseph White, a Mohawk Indian, will sing a solo, and other music will be furnished by the Willamette university band. Dr. George H. Alden, professor of history, will preside.

BARTH TO TELL OF GAMBLERS' ATTACK

Whether the secretary of state will accept and file petitions received here Friday for a recall election involving Lotus L. Langley, district attorney of Multnomah county, will depend upon an opinion of Attorney General Van Winkle to be written today.

The recall petitions were sponsored by the so-called "citizens committee of 50" and were brought to Salem by Charles Adams, chairman of the committee; Bjorn Johannson, ex-chairman and present candidate for city commissioner of Portland, and Harry Gross, Portland attorney. The petitions contained 17,896 signatures.

The committee alleged that these signatures were sufficient for the reason that they exceeded 25 per cent of the highest vote cast for a justice of the state supreme court at the last election.

George Mowry and other representatives of Langley contended that under the state constitution the petitions shall contain 25 per cent of the combined vote of all candidates for one supreme court position at the previous election.

Victor Barth will tell the city council committee on investigation of state fair gambling this afternoon his story that he was attacked by the gamblers and that city police failed to act against his assailants. The hearing on gambling will be held at the city hall between 3 and 4 o'clock.

On Saturday of the fair Barth charged that he was standing in front of one of the gambling games, when the operator called him a "spotter" and demanded that he move on. When he refused to move, Barth said he was chased and beaten by the gamblers.

City officers later in the day said that when Barth came into the police station he bore no prominent marks of having been beaten as he alleged.

Chairman H. H. Vandevort of the committee has declared a thorough investigation will be made. Other committeemen are F. E. Needham and F. L. Wilkinson.

If this contention is correct, the petitions for the recall election would have to contain 20,588 signatures.

Secretary of State Howe indicated that the question was involved, and that he probably would be guided by the opinion of the attorney general.

Hamel Held to Grand Jury on Check Charges

D. E. Hamel waived preliminary hearing in justice court yesterday and was bound to the grand jury when he pleaded not guilty to two charges involving bad checks. Bail on each case was lowered to $500, but he was unable to raise the amount and is still in the county jail.

Hamel's wife, Gladys Kearns Hamel, was brought before Justice of the Peace M. H. Hayden yesterday on charge of giving a check without sufficient funds. She pleaded not guilty and her case was continued pending disposition of the action against her husband. Meantime, she is out on her own recognizance. Complaint against her was made by C. M. Robinson who held a $18.35 worthless check she allegedly gave.
