FORMAL OPENING OF PLANT IN DECEMBER

MT. ANGEL, Oct. 17—The Mt. Angel cooperative creamery's new building, on which construction is rapidly pushing ahead, will be formally opened at fitting exercises sometime in December, according to announcement recently of Frank Hettwer. Contractors for the new building are Quigley Bros. of Portland.

The occasion, which will be doubly auspicious, for it will also mark the 20th anniversary of the cooperative creamery. The event will be held coincident with the yearly patron's meeting.

Installation of machinery is already under way, and will likely be completed by the end of this month. The new building has one feature not planned at the time construction was started: plastering of the interior walls.

DUPLICATION STILL PREVAILS IS CLAIM

Need for Merging Colleges Stressed by Speaker At Chamber Meet

The board of higher education in Oregon to eliminate competition between Oregon State college and the University of Oregon has failed only with the passage of the Zorn-Macpherson merger bill will the aids of economy and efficiency be met. A. K. Berman of Corvallis told the chamber of commerce here yesterday at its noon luncheon. Berman gave a 30-minute address in behalf of the bill; next week the Eugene side will be presented by Judge Lawrence T. Harris of that city.

Berman sketched the history of higher education in Oregon in the last four years showing how the 1929 legislature through the Schuimeler bill aimed to eliminate useless duplication between the Corvallis and Eugene schools and sought more efficiency with lowered costs.

"The action came because money was inveigled out of a too willing legislature with each institution trying to develop its prime of education as best could," Berman declared.

Showing Said Poor
He then recounted the making of the federal survey of higher education in Oregon and discussed the findings of that survey. Corvallis stands 10th among schools of its class, Berman said; the University of Oregon came in 34th while the normal school situation put Oregon next to last in that regard of all states in the union. The survey showed Oregon's per capita costs and money raised by taxation for education exceeded the average of other states.

"Dr. Kerr was appointed by a divided board to kill the Zorn-Macpherson bill," Berman said. "Don't forget that he got only four votes with three opposed to him and two men not voting. He is on indefinite tenure and can be removed at the board's will. There is no assurance that the fight in Oregon education is stopped by the appointment of Dr. Kerr."

Berman then turned to alleged mistakes made by the board of higher education including the removal of the school of commerce to Eugene, the setting up of overlapping two-year courses at both schools and the beginning and development of the Salem office.

For State Benefit
The speaker declared that in the interests of the state rather than of Corvallis or Eugene, the Zorn-Macpherson plan should be carried out. He declared the Corvallis campus and buildings adequate for a merged Oregon State University. He said one great normal school should be placed at Eugene. He advocated junior colleges for Ashland and LaGrande and proposed that the state use the buildings at Monmouth for state institutions.

Creation of a law school at Salem will involve but little cost, Berman stated.

In opening his address, the speaker said he did not appear as a partisan because he lived at Corvallis but spoke for the bill because he believed it, would be of vast aid to the state. He said Salem newspapers had been fair in their treatment of news about the merger fight but held that 90 per cent of the newspapers in the merger and were prejudiced against the merger and would not give its proponents fair space in their columns.

The totals today reveal that so far there are 22,108 more voters this year than in the previous presidential election. The democrats added 14,526 and the republicans 8,702. Registrations from other parties showed a slight loss.

Anniversary of Congregational Church is Noted

A large crowd of Salem church goers attended the 50th anniversary services at the First Congregational church Sunday night, when Rev. W. C. Kantner, pastor of the church at the time the present building was constructed, gave the main address. Early history of the church was presented in interesting detail by the former pastor, now retired.

Rev. J. R. Simonds, present pastor, and Rev. H. C. Stover of the Kaigh Memorial Congregational church also took part in the service. Music was provided by a choir directed by William McMillan, Sr., and composed of members of a number of churches here and dressed in olden costumes.

Gillies Injured When Car Skids; On Eugene Trip

En route to Eugene yesterday to visit their daughter who is in a hospital there, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gillie of Salem were both injured when the car in which they were driving skidded on the wet highway near Halsey and overturned. Mrs. Gillie suffered possible internal injuries as well as a broken collar bone and broken ribs, while Mr. Gillie was more fortunate, receiving only minor injuries. Both were taken to a Eugene hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Gillie live at 365 North 23rd street. He is a salesman for Nelson brothers.

LOYD L. LOW, sheriff of Klamath county, visited the state police offices yesterday. Low is considered one of the best sheriffs in Oregon, and he apparently likes the job too, since he is seeking reelection on the republican ticket. He expects to return south today.

Another visitor at the police headquarters was William S. MacQuarrie, head of the federal secret service in Portland and a friend of many recent standing of Charles F. Pray, police superintendent. "Mac" was in charge of the secret service detail for Patrick J. Hurley, secretary of war, when the latter was in Portland during the recent American Legion convention.

And while mentioning state police, visitors thought for a time that George Alexander, W. H. McClain and Charles H. McClellan of that organization, were being moved out into the street. They were at their desks out in the hall however and apparently were going to fight ejection to the last. Investigation revealed new legislation was being laid on their office floor.

Captain McClain of the headquarters-division of this same police organization, left last night on a short vacation trip to Eugene. He was on his way to bring home some venison. And speaking of venison, the press boys today will share some of the deer shot on another venture, the gift of Jerry Owen and Onas Olson of the bonus commission.

And they are still talking about the great football games of last Saturday, one at Portland and the other at Berkeley. Both upsets, one at the expense of Oregon and the other very much in favor of Washington State. But with about six more weeks of the game, a lot more upsets will keep state-house workers' minds off of too much politics at least.

But the contests just past really are subjects for considerable discussion, including a mighty boner on the part of Oregon. All four touchdowns in the two games were thrilling. Two were made after 45 yard runs, one 58 yard run after a fancy pass and the other a goal to goal play, a pass and a 69 yard run. What games!

Well, 21 counties have filed their complete reports for registration, leaving 15 more to report. Marion county was the 21st to make its entry with 30,640 voters, an increase of 1,407 over four years ago. Of the counties 16 reported gains while only 5 reported decreases. All but one reported democratic gain, and that one was the same. The republicans gained in 14 counties and lost in 7.

The totals today reveal that so far there are 22,108 more voters this year than in the previous presidential election. The democrats added 14,526 and the republicans 8,702. Registrations from other parties showed a slight loss.

Jack Meier, son of Governor Lullus L. Meier, underwent an operation on his throat at Portland yesterday, and was reported getting along fine. The operation however prevented the governor from coming to Salem.

The boys at the press room Saturday augmented your correspondent's contribution under this heading, by writing one on us. But where did they imagine the 5-cent cigars. All the rest we are forced to admit and incidentally it resulted in some tall explaining. But who minds explaining when an attractive young woman is involved they said. Oh, Yeah!

PROGRESS IS MADE IN Y. ENROLLMENT

Stating that there would be no question about fulfilling the membership budget of the Salem Y. M. C. A. if people realized the good work accomplished there, Dr. Carl Gregg Doney, president of Williamette university, spoke before members of the Y enrollment teams at their regular daily luncheon meeting yesterday. Teams should get out and do their best for this reason he declared.

A check-up by teams showed a total of 42 new members for the day's work, amounting to $223 in cash and bringing the accumulated total for the year to $2110. A $15,000 membership budget has been set as the mark to attain this year.

The team captained by Paul B. Wallace again set the high mark for the day with 13 memberships totaling $223.

C. A. Sprague presided at the meeting which was the fourth of the present enrollment drive. Teams will meet at the same time today.

James W. Mott, state corporation commissioner and candidate for representative in Congress from this district, left yesterday on his extensive campaign tour which will keep him away from the capitol until election day. Mott has a hard race against State treasurer and is not believing his opposition, even though he is optimistic.

Charles A. Howard, who was taken sick at Roseburg last week, was expected to return here today. His illness was declared not of a serious nature but he was compelled to cancel speaking engagements for that week and the present week.

Patronage for Hotel de Minto Shows Decrease

W. E. Rigney, in charge of Salem's Hotel de Minto for transients, reported yesterday that the number of jobless applying for food and shelter has fallen off during the past month to a large degree, although they are still serving about 100 meals a day.

During the summer many high school boys were on the road, Rigney reported but these have been noticeably lacking lately.

Hundreds of Four-H club members from all over the state are in Portland this week attending the Pacific International Livestock show. Their headquarters are at Camp Plummer and their prize winning animals and home economic exhibits will be on display in the Four-H barns at Penney Hall. Monday and Tuesday will be devoted to demonstrations and contests. State champion judging teams will vie for interstate honors, while an agricultural and home economics demonstration team from each state will compete for the Plummer trophy.

Monday night the exhibitors will be the guests of Pres. Wilcox at the rodeo. Tuesday four outstanding club members from each state will be guests of the Portland Kiwanis club. At night the governor's banquet will be held in Penney hall, and Gov. Meier will greet the Four-H clubbers. Portland Rotary will assist in making the banquet a success.

Wednesday has been designated as Montgomery Ward day, repeating a custom of several years in which this company has been host to the young people. This year the entertainment will include a boat trip on the Willamette, luncheon and a theatre matinee. Thursday the young people will go to Seaside and Astoria as guests of the chambers of commerce of those cities.

Supreme Court To Admit Fifty New Barristers

The state supreme court today will admit to practice in Oregon 50 new attorneys who were successful in the bar examinations held in Salem last July. Results of the examinations were announced last week.

Included among those who will be admitted to practice are two women, Della Avery of Portland and Ruth M. Mellinger of Newberg. A total of 82 women have been admitted to practice law in Oregon since 1885.

The act allowing women to practice law in Oregon was approved by the state legislature in 1885. Mrs. Mary A. Leonard, who practiced in Portland for many years, was the first woman admitted to the Oregon bar. She received her commission in 1888.

Too Many Birds; Basis of Arrest

First local legal casualty of the hunting season appeared in justice court yesterday, when Eugene Meyers was haled up for having two female China pheasants. He pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and costs, but the fine was remitted and Meyers placed on probation for six months. He paid costs.
