Thousands Riot in Streets After Attempted Plea To Commons Fails

sacred world war memorial, where the crowd attempted to grab up wreaths.
By the time the crowd had been pushed all the way to Trafalgar Square its good temper was worn out and the mob spirit showed itself.
The police endeavored to keep traffic moving through the square, which is one of London's main centers, but this was impossible. The throngs stopped buses and motorcars, until finally repeated pressure by the mounted men pushed them along the Strand.
The mob was eager to battle with the police, but the most part fled in panic before the mounted men, although now and again attempts were made to pull policemen from their horses. On such occasions riot clubs flashed and the attackers soon desisted.

high. Women registration there accounted for the entire $9,000 increase.
On the other hand, in President Hoover's home state of California, the republicans gained only 29,000 while the democrats rolled up an increase of $70,000.
All of those entitled to vote will not do so, of course. A study of previous elections reveals a normal state-at-home vote of 15 per cent. This year the exports differ as to the percentage who will not exercise the voting privilege. Some figure it higher, others lower.
If the 15 per cent normal basis is used, the actual vote next week would be close to 49,000,909 or 39,920,455, an increase of more than 3,000,000 over 1928.

LONDON, Nov. 1—(AP)—A rumor went the rounds today in London and Stockholm that the engagement of Prince George of England and Princess Ingrid of Sweden will be announced here November 11 at a get-together of the British and Swedish royal families.
The occasion would be a dinner in London celebrating the 50th birthday of the princess' father, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf. The possibility was seen that the Prince of Wales really is determined to remain a bachelor. The fact that his younger brother has seen a lot of the princess lately has made him the popular favorite.

Candidates in Caricature

This is how Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, Democratic nominee for President, appears to the eye and facile crayon of Massaguer, world-famous Cuban caricaturist.

THE state highway commission will hold an important meeting at Portland today, and it will start at 9 o'clock instead of at 10 as has been customary. About a million dollars worth of contracts will be let, including another section of the Salem-Portland stretch through Aurora.

Everything, including virtually all news except politics, is being held in abeyance until after next Tuesday or possible until the week after. Governor Meier said Tuesday that no one is making any decisions along business lines or any other this week. Goal, even the board meetings here were quiet.

It took the board of control just five minutes to handle its scheduled program yesterday, and the land board equally as long. The report of W. W. Ridgely, another section of the Salem-Portland stretch through Aurora.

Dr. A. F. Sether, prominent physician, was at the capitol yesterday. He said he was much interested in the defeat of the Zorn-Macpherson school bill. Ray Conway of the motor vehicle association, was also a capitol visitor, as was Lynn McCreedie, Eugene banker.

Governor Meier is scheduled to be one of the principal speakers at the state republican rally in Portland Friday night. The rally will be broadcast. Meier, who visited President Hoover at the national capitol, is interested in the reelection of the president. And he advances some mighty logical reasons.

Donald D. Huntress of Portland was stopped by fate in his ambition to be an attorney. Huntress took the bar examinations last July and just last Wednesday the certificate admitting him to the Oregon bar was delivered him by the supreme court. Word was received here yesterday that the youth died suddenly on Saturday.

And just six more days of political campaigning, then a day of voting, and the next day the headaches for so many and the celebration for not quite so many. But regardless of who wins, things bers of that organization were asked to take part in the club's games. The first gathering of the chess players will be next Monday night, November 7, in the parish house of St. Paul's Episcopal church here. Rev. George Swift is one of the club leaders along with Clara Lee, Warren Jones, Don Upjohn.

PURVINE'S FOLKS CALLED ZENA, Nov. 1—The C. M. Purvine family were called to Portland Monday by reports of the critical condition of their eldest son, Walker Purvine, who is a patient at the Veterans' hospital suffering from a severe case of blood poison. The infection started in a finger on his right hand and gradually spread throughout his body. At last reports he was slightly improved.

business was checked. In August there was a substantial upturn, in September a greater rise, and in the first part of October most of the common measures of business activity for which figures are available continued to advance. In part the business recovery has been seasonal, but in extent it has been more than seasonal, and all the composite indexes of business volume, which are adjusted for the seasonal factor, have turned up more sharply than at any time since the long decline began.

Repeal Will Lose Heavily, Predicts
"This repeal proposal is going to be buried so deep its own author will not be able to dig it up," Pennington declared while the crowd, many of whom were members of young people's organizations, cheered.

"Jimmie" Walker could learn all he has from "Boss" Croker and Croker would still have plenty left Walker never knew. Tweed could do the same with Croker and have devility to spare.

President Carl G. Doney of Wilamette, Mrs. Buck, state W. C. T. U. worker and Fred J. Toose, Jr., president of the Marion county league which is working against the Anderson act, were those on the platform with Pennington.

PROMINENT MEN TO APPEAR AT Y. M. C. A.

During his career he has appeared in concert in Wurzburg, Munich, Berlin, Brussels, Copenhagen, London and Christiania.

OLEO ATTACKED AS PUBLIC DETRIMENT

Five thousand more dairymen would be employed in Oregon if the 6,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine being consumed in the state annually were replaced by Oregon produced butter. George H. Fullenweider, president of the Oregon Dairymen's association, told Kiwanis club members here Tuesday. Fullenweider, speaking in behalf of the 10-cent tax on oleomargarine, said the investment in the latter industry in Oregon was $100,000; the dairy investment needed to replace it, he asserted, would total $5,000,000.

Fullenweider tied the oleomargarine industry up with "big business" and Wall street, and said the issue in the tax fight was whether Oregon was to be able to control her own house.
He caustically referred to a previous speaker for oleomargarine as disloyal to the butter cause, saying in 1919 in the legislature she had voted for a tax on oleomargarine.

No butter on the coast is better than Oregon butter, Fullenweider declared. Its export to California has increased 20 per cent since the 22-score grading test was passed by the 1931 legislature. Fullenweider said the state's butter took first prizes at the state fair here this fall.

SECOND MYSTERY GRAVE DISCOVERED

LINCOLN, Nov. 1—Another grave has been discovered by J. R. Sturgeon and sons of Lincoln who found four skeletons in a grave Friday, while excavating a basement for their home, just north of the site of the old Witten flouring mill which was razed last year.

The last grave was found about five feet from the first one and contained the large skeleton of a man which apparently had been thrown in with the head down and feet pointing toward the surface. The bones were all in a decaying state.

The play, as suspected as the other four skeletons were apparently just thrown into the grave. One had a fractured skull showing a wound caused by some sharp instrument.
Numerous visitors have viewed the skeletons since they were found.

ARENSTEIN-KEISER CONCERT SUCCESS

Madrigal Club and Some Other Local Musicians Add to Program

Those who pulled themselves away from home and friends and political speeches via radio to attend the concert at the First Christian church last night were magnificently rewarded. Even the "tired business man" forgot that he was making a sacrifice to accompany his wife to the event, and the ladies forgot the storm without and its menace to shoes and hats as the program progressed. Michael Arenstein, cellist with the Portland symphony orchestra, with Ruth Bradley Keiser as pianist, were the artists of the concert. In addition the Madrigal club, Prof. E. W. Hobson, director, under whose auspices the Portland artists appeared, sang one selection; and Miss Lillian Scott, soprano, a member of the club, appeared in one solo.

Mr. Arenstein had two numbers, a Gregorian chant in three parts; and Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Theme of Rossini." While the latter was delightful in its variant movements, with a racy quality quite in contrast with most of the compositions of this Russian composer, it was the Gregorian chant which rose to greater heights of excellence. Its second movement, the "andante tranquillo," touched the emotional depths which the "cello" in the hands of the master evokes. The Gregorian number was really a duet, for the piano part is quite as important as that of the "cello, perhaps more so in the third movement, the "allegro molto." Mrs. Keiser played with the sturdy competence she regularly shows. Her playing was a taste to make one wish she might appear later in the season in a concert of her own.

In the Tchaikovsky selection it was easy for one to become engrossed in the mechanics of the cellist. His tones were wonderfully precise, and one could see they were the result of rare accuracy of fingering. From the throaty tones of the bass, as mournful as the sob of the distant surf, to the high violin tones as clear as the notes of a singing bird, this number permitted Arenstein to cover the whole range of the mechanics of the instrument.

Lillian Scott has often delighted Salem audiences, but never more than she did last night when she sang the "Spring Song of the Robin Woman," from Charles Wakefield Cadman's recent American opera "Shnehwinn." The recitative was well done, but it was the aria with its lyric which Miss Scott excelled in. Her voice showed fresh powers and greater assurance, the natural result of her continued training.

The Madrigal club sang Clocke's "How Summer Came." The words are a ballad in blank verse; and the music is likewise devoid of much melody; more of a vocal exercise. The club sang however with the harmony which regularly characterizes groups singing under Prof. Hobson.
