NEW CANNERY FOR ISLANDERS

Will be in Operation by fall; Will Handle the Tomato Plantings

GRAND ISLAND, Nov. 8.—Tomato growers of the district were elated when Morton Tompkins, local farmer, made public a statement of intention to erect a new cannery building. The plans are nearing completion for the erection of a building which will replace the one destroyed by fire during the summer of 1931. Since the time of the fire, the grand island brand of tomatoes has been available to the public.

In constructing this building the concrete warehouse standing on the old premises will be used. The new cannery which will be 20 by 60 feet, will stand above the old cannery on the hill, thus making it possible for the canned goods to travel by a gravity system through the cannery and into the warehouse. The same brothers, Morton and Jake Tompkins, are also sponsoring the new building and a portion of the machinery from the old cannery will be used again.

Previous to the destruction of the first cannery, tomatoes were cared for from nearly 199 acres. Since the fire the tomato yield in the district has been between 10 and 12 million cans. Plans for the coming year call for approximately 60 acres, which will produce between 8000 and 10,000 cases of canned goods. The capacity of the new proposed cannery will be about 1000 cans per day during the rush season. The present plan is to have the new cannery in operation by next year.
