Bits for Breakfast

When I came here I found a happy people who loved the country, and were content to live in it to the end of life and be buried beneath its green sod where the spreading oak casts its grateful shade, and the snow capped mountains look down in wild and solemn grandeur.

Thus concluded the valuable and interesting historical sketch of Judge Boise. He often told of his first visit to the home of Rev. O. Dickinson in Salem. As related in his first visit, in 1852, on horseback, in company with U. S. Judge (territorial judge) Matthew P. Deady, to hold court here. Mr. Boise, newly arrived in the territory, was acting as prosecuting attorney, by appointment of Judge Deady.

The judge and his acting prosecuting attorney put up at the hotel of E. N. Cooke, afterward named the Mansion house, northwest corner of Liberty and Division streets. (The old Mansion House stood until the eighties and into the nineties or later. At one time the Dugan brothers, old time plumbers, occupied it, or part of it.) On later visits to Salem, the then young attorney, R. P. Boise, also stopped at the Cooke hotel. In 1852, or perhaps in 1854, on one of his visits, having heard that Rev. O. Dickinson had come west with his bride and was living here, he inquired at the hotel the location of the Dickinson home, and after the evening meal took a walk, by way of a trail through the thick timber and brush bordering to make a call there—he had known Mr. Dickinson as Massachusetts, the memory of that visit remained with him, for it was no easy matter for him to get through the timber, from the hotel to the Dickinson house. Other old timers recall that the forest that then covered the site of Salem, along the Willamette river as far south as State street, and east beyond Commercial, was full of deer and bear and other wild animals, and that the logging for the Mission mill was at first carried on in that forest—the logs being drawn to the mill with oxen.

Judge Boise in his historical sketch, as the reader recalls, mentioned the Cooke (afterward the Mansion) House and the Mission House, but omitted the Island House. The Mission House meant the Jason Lee house, still standing at 960 Broadway, the first home built in Salem (in 1840), still standing.

As Judge Boise was a very accurate and careful man, this leaves the inference that the Island House was not built until after 1852. The writer has generally had the idea, from old timers, that the Island House was erected before 1852. Can any one still living say definitely if it was? Dead records do not help much in answering this query. The Island House was located near the corner of Belmont and Broadway, on the west side of Broadway. The donation land patent went finally to J. B. McClane, after long litigation with J. D. Boon. McClane made the first deed transfer to Preston Hamilton of the land on at least a part of which the Island House stood. He made another original transfer to John McBees, or perhaps the Island House extended that far north; though more likely the old Mrs. Spots house stood there. Dead records show that this property was known as the "Riley & Kendall block" in early days. These names may help to refresh the memory of some old timer. The Bits man asks for help in giving the old Mrs. Spots house stood there. Dead records show that this property was known as the "Riley & Kendall block" in early days. These names may help to refresh the memory of some old timer.

(The Bits man, with many others, the whole world over, has been on a long search for the Dorion woman's grave. He now believes he knows where this famous woman of early history was buried. Much more of this later, after a lot of checking up.)

SALARIES SLASHED FOR CITY OFFICERS

Woodburn's New Council Starts Term With Economy Drive for all

WOODBURN, Nov. 19.—Woodburn's new city council, which formally took office Tuesday night, immediately launched an economy campaign when salaries for the various city officers were set by the city days. Cuts of five percent on the salary of every city employee, except the street commissioner, were made.

All the city employees were reappointed by the council. They are: water commissioner, E. N. Soule; street commissioner, John Muir; city attorney, Blaine McCord; health officer, Dr. Gerald B. Smith; library board, Mrs. Flora Poorman and Miss Mary Scott. Mrs. Poorman and Miss Scott, with no salaries, serve for a term of three years.

The new salary schedule per year is: water commissioner, $1,200; health officer, $1,200; city attorney, $357; health officer, $85; city treasurer, $305; city recorder, $1020; fire chief, $102; marshal, $1020; mayor and council, $30.60. A reduction was also made in the hourly wages for common laborers hired by the city from time to time. The wage was reduced from 30 to 25 cents per hour.

The new boards and committees as appointed by Mayor Broyles, are: water board, Clark and Espy; health committee, Mattson and Miller; finance board, Espy and Miller; fire board, Mattson and Clark; ordinance committee, Espy and Miller; property committee, Clark and Espy. Councilman C. J. Espy was chosen president of the council.

Bids for the city recorder, treasurer and marshal were set at $1500, $5000 and $500, respectively. The treasurer's and recorder's bonds were filed and accepted.

Harding Reports On Scholar Test For Hazel Green

HAZEL GREEN, Nov. 19.—Wayne Harding, supervisor of rural schools, visited school Wednesday and brought findings in the intelligence tests. Frank Johnson Jr. showed junior high ability, the remainder of the class eighth grade average. The class passed the test in arithmetic and spelling exempt from the study. Mr. Harding expects to organize 4-H clubs soon. The school has had successful clubs for several years in sewing and cooking.

The measles are seriously hindering attendance.

Child Pianist Plays For Chemawa Pupils

CHEMAWA, Nov. 19.—The child pianist, Laddie Boy, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Etself Gray-Lehvigne, appeared at the Chemawa auditorium Thursday night. This program was arranged exclusively for the Chemawa student body and faculty and so enthusiastically received. This attraction is being booked in all the large cities on the coast and middle west and is being enthusiastically received everywhere.

The measles are seriously hindering attendance.

Gas Water Heater Explodes, Causing Damage by Blaze

AURORA, Nov. 19.—The fire department was called out at 11:30 p. m. Friday for a fire which had started in the kitchen of the William Flick residence, caused by the explosion of a gasoline water heater. The walls on the lower floor were seriously damaged by water and some windows were broken. The Flick house is one which lies directly in line with the path of the new highway and will have to be removed. While the house is being damaged it can be repaired. The loss is covered by insurance.
