Asserted Facts of Slaying Brought out at Hearing in Justice Court

grabbed a mop and hit Baughn three times over the head, until he left her brother and ran after her. At this scene a Mr. Knowles, in the kitchen while the fight was on, came with a gun, ready to kill Baughn, but Mrs. Schocker told him not to do that and took the gun.

She quoted her brother as saying after the slaying, "He came here with the intentions of killing me."

Henley Baughn, young son of Baughn and who has been living with Mrs. Schocker and her brother, was also a witness to the episode, but was not brought into Justice Court.

Asked if she intended to adopt Henley, Mrs. Schocker said no, she did not feel it necessary, as Baughn had given her his word of honor that he would not take the boy from her; and that she signed a note saying she could have the boy to raise to the best of her ability.

DOCK ISSUE NEEDS MORE IRONING OUT

poration, or the voting of a special bond issue. The latter proposition is deemed impossible at the present time, Hamilton said.

W. P. Ellis, who with J. N. Chambers and Hamilton, constitute the chamber group which would organize the corporation, explained the financing of the project and presented an agreement of the Salem Navigation company management to enter into the lease if the dock is built.

That the navigation company may be asked to pay rent on its present property, owned by the city, developed in comments by Alderman W. H. Dancy, who repeatedly spoke skeptically of the municipal dock proposition and urged the chamber committee with questions.

Dancy asked why the navigation company should not now pay the city rent if it would be able to do so on leasing the projected terminal building.

Highway Board's Demurrer Filed, Sea Route Case

Demurrer to the complaint was filed in circuit court Monday in the suit brought by Bruce McDonald of Columbia county to enjoin the state highway commission from proceeding with construction operations on the first unit of the Wolf creek shortcut road from Portland to the sea. The demurrer was prepared by J. M. De-

Devers alleged in his demurrer that McDonald is without legal capacity to sue, and that the facts set out in the complaint were not sufficient to constitute a cause of action. He denied that the state highway commission had no authority to designate the Wolf creek route as a state road without infringing on the constitution.

2 Doctors Feared For are Delayed, Logs Block Road

DALLAS, Nov. 21—Considerable apprehension over Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Kelly and Dr. and Mrs. Ector Bossatti, who were not back from a trip to Breitenbush on schedule time, developed here today, and was dispelled with their appearance at 5 o'clock tonight.

They reported car trouble and a stretch of the road from which they had to remove sizable logs before passing, combined to cause their delay home. State police had been asked to investigate.

Accident Policy Pays Dividends, Edwards Learns

Again big dividends have accrued from a $1 Statesman accident insurance policy.

Arthur Edwards of 148 Union street, yesterday received a check through his Statesman policy for $74.28, to pay for injuries and disability he suffered as the result of an automobile accident near Albany July 26. Edwards received weekly disability payments for the time he was laid up, July 26 to September 17.

HIGH TRIBUTE PAID TO BERTHA MOORES

B. F. Irvine, Classmate At Willamette, Tells Life Activities

Bertha Moores, pioneer Salem woman who died in a Portland hospital recently, is paid the tribute of having lived "A Golden Life" in an editorial appearing in the Oregon Journal under that heading. She was born and reared in Salem and was a sister of A. N. Moores of this city.

The article was written by Frank Irvine, editor of the Journal, who was a fellow student of Miss Moores at Willamette university. It reads:

"She was a young college girl at Willamette university in the presidency of the state Dr. Gatch. "She was Bertha, and her twin sister was Aitha, Moores. They were sisters of the late Charles B. Moores and members of a prominent pioneer Oregon family. Each of the twins was a picture of all that is good in the human mind. She was so striking that many of their friends could not tell them apart. "A huge bust picture of them, displayed for years in the window of the photograph studio of the late Joseph Buchtel in Portland, was a show picture that caused all strangers to stop and stand and gaze. The wonderful picture made the twins known to the borders of Oregon and beyond. "They were star students at college, both educationally and socially. Their grades were high. Their scholarship was known alike to faculty and students. They graduated at the head of their class, and not long after, Aitha left this world for another. "Bertha became a teacher in the public schools, advancing in time to become preceptress in Willamette university, a position on which she shed credit, beauty and dignity. "Entering the commercial field later, she took up her residence in Portland. Her former pupil, Governor West, appointed her a member of the first industrial welfare commission under the law that fixed a minimum wage for women, and that was appealed to and validated by the United States supreme court. The other members of this first commission were Amadee Smith and Father O'Hara. Miss Moores was thus among the first women to hold high position in the government of Oregon. "Last week Miss Moores contracted a cold. In two days it developed into pneumonia. Two days later, in Emanuel hospital, the spirit of this child of Oregon winged its flight into the land of mystery. "Earth knows no gentler, kinder, more triumphant life. It is doubtful if any word of hers ever left a wound. There was a heart and a soul into which resentment could not enter. It was a life to call men and women to gentler thoughts, to finer impulses, to loftier ideals, to nobler aims. "It was a life that was a boon to her friends, a victory for her relatives, a golden message to all who knew her."

There seems to be a lot of fuss in the papers about a man being relieved of the command of the National Guard. Gosh, when it gets to a point where a chief can't fire a subordinate officer for insubordination, or whatever the cause, without fighting it out in the press—what can one do about it.

Student Finances Show More Funds Than Month Ago

The finances of the Associated Student body of Salem high school, which have not been on too high a plane for some time, have noticeably increased between October 15 and November 15, was the report turned in by auditors Saturday. The present balance is $387.57, or over $150 more than was on hand a month ago.

Receipts taken in for the month totaled $748.83, while disbursements amounted to $361.26.

26 Drivers Lose Licenses, Result Of Intoxication

Twenty-six persons forfeited their motor vehicle drivers' licenses because of intoxication and drunken driving during the month of October, it was announced at the state department Friday. Six others lost their licenses for reckless driving, while another license was suspended for a hit and run offense.

Of the 35 suspensions and revocations for October, 11 were based on convictions in the Portland courts.

Accident Board Files Two Suits

Continuing its policy of rigorous collection of past due accounts, the State Industrial Accident commission yesterday filed two more collection suits in circuit court here. Both complaints allege that the defendants have failed to pay moneys due the commission for protection given workmen. Vera M. Stewart is named defendant for the sum of $30.48 and costs; Arthur C. Locke is named defendant for the sum of $53.74 and costs.

Candidacy Cost Nothing Except Help for Party

Aside from contributions to the central committee of the republican party in this county, candidates for reelection to county offices expended nothing, according to five reports filed Monday with the county clerk. Nomination on the ballots of both parties made this possible for the candidates who were unopposed November 8. D. G. Drager, treasurer, gave $10; B. B. Herriek, surveyor, $15; Oscar A. Steelhammer, assessor, $10; Mary L. Falkerson, county school superintendent, $20; L. E. Barrick, coroner, no expense.

GOVERNOR FRANK J. LONERGAN was here yesterday

In fact he has been here every day since becoming governor—and called his first board of control meeting. But at the suggestion of one of the members the meeting was adjourned until today. So Governor Frank will be back again.

It appears there will be several pre-Thanksgiving parties tonight. Among others we heard yesterday Henry M. Hansen is entertaining for several state officials and their wives, and then too there is the big Secretary of State Employees' picnic. And since the press gallery has been invited to the latter, naturally we are more interested in it.

Robin Moser is Burned in Eyes At School Lab

Word was received here Saturday that Robin Moser, Willamette graduate of two years ago, was badly burned about the eyes a few days ago as a result of an explosion in a chemistry laboratory in which he was working at Oregon State college.

Moser attended the University of Oregon last year and obtained his bachelor's degree in chemistry. This year he is working toward his master's degree at Oregon State. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Moser of Pratum vicinity.

W. U. Students Start Holiday On Wednesday

The annual Thanksgiving vacation at Willamette university will start Wednesday noon, November 23, it was announced yesterday by Dean Frank M. Erickson. This added half day will give students an opportunity to travel to their homes for the observance. A Thanksgiving assembly for students was held Monday with Dr. Bruce Baxter, of the University of Southern California, as the principal speaker. Dr. Baxter declared that people of this country had much to be thankful for, in spite of the depression. In many countries, our present condition would be considered as a high degree of prosperity, he said.

DONATION OF FOOD FOR RELIEF ASKED

As the county court is equipped to handle donations for relief this winter, it had adopted as its slogan, "Nobody in Marion county is to go hungry this winter." The Red Cross, cooperating with the court, maintains a commissary to which donations are solicited by the court. The county heads are asking persons having food going to waste to telephone the Red Cross offices, 7123.

"It is certain that what food work and other employment can be furnished will not nearly meet the situation we have to confront this winter," said Commissioner J. E. Smith yesterday. "No one should go hungry and it's our aim to see that no one does. But no vegetables or other food should go to waste and we want to get all of it under cover."

While short on food, the court has a sufficient supply of wood to save unemployed residents from going without fuel, it was pointed out, in commenting on the situation at Portland.

Truck Haulers Given Judgment Over Mine Firm

E. R. King and Arthur Pederson, truck haulers, won a judgment for $3312.88 yesterday against the Amalgamated Mining company, operators on the North Santiam in the Mehama district. The case went to the circuit court jury here at 2:25 p. m. Monday and a verdict signed by T. L. Davidson, foreman, was in Judge L. H. McMahan's hands by 4:30 p. m.

Plaintiffs based claim on alleged failure of the defendant company to pay them on a hauling contract. The defendant offered $248 in settlement. Original claim of the plaintiffs was for $11,000 but this was scaled down considerably in court before the jury received the case for deliberation.

Meanest Thief Takes Glasses From Washroom

Last week's meanest thief is reported from the Y. W. C. A. in the person of the girl or woman who took a pair of glasses from the wash room. The owner, a girl working on a small wage, noticed the theft almost right away, and a thorough search was instituted, but to no avail. The girl's purse, under her glasses, was not molested.

She can't buy new glasses; in fact, the old ones were not all paid for; she can't work without glasses—and so Monday she was minus a job, as well as glasses.

Y. W. C. A. officials urge that whoever has the girl's glasses return them—through the mail if no other way.
