

Rough Boys From East Here to Meet Jones and Gardinier

MITCHELL AND HIDER ON HAND

New Yorker and Syrian to Match Bruising Tactics With Home Crowd

Having gone far afield to find men he considers able to hand the "rough stuff" right back at Henry Jones and Joe Gardinier, Matchmaker Harry Plant has high hopes of a pleasurable wrestling session tonight at the armory.

Plant is bringing in, from far away Gotham, a young man known as Jack Mitchell, somewhere around Jones' size and weight, as one grappler who will be able to stamp on toes, slap and elbow his way around just as effectively as is the welterweight champion's habit. Ability to rough it was the qualification that bought Mitchell the job of meeting "Old Henry" tonight, and the matchmaker is confident Mitchell will fill the bill.

In the first bout of tonight's double main event, Gardinier will oppose another stranger who, it develops, is one of those colorful boys. He is Dave Hider, not long ago from Syria. Fans who see a man built on the general lines of the business end of a scoop shovel walking around town today with something on his head that looks rather like a bandage—but is in reality his native headgear—that will be Mr. Hider.

Hider is also a welterweight, and to prove that his name doesn't mean what it sounds like in English, he announces that he is ready to take on Jones, Robin Reed and any other big timers who may be recognized as such around these parts. For the present, he plans to show what he can do against Gardinier, who hasn't quite the reputation of those top notch boys but who nevertheless has his points, and ability to turn the other cheek is not one of them.

Not long ago Hider was grappling on his native head beyond the oceans, but he has been around the United States quite a bit. Until this trip, he hadn't been farther west than Salt Lake City, where he grappled with and defeated Hy Schramm and some other prominent wrestlers. He uses the flying wristlock and the bear hug with considerable proficiency, but can hardly be said to have any speciality.

Hider has heard that Gardinier is something of a "bad boy", but promised on his arrival here that he was prepared to wrestle to any tune his opponent picked, and transposed it either into sharps or flats.

Twelve Gridmen To Uphold East's Honors Selected

CHICAGO, Nov. 28—(AP)—Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern, who will be associated with Coach Andy Kerr of Colgate in the preparation of the eastern team in the annual East-West Shrine hospital charity game at San Francisco January 2, today announced the names of 12 players who will receive invitations. Harry Newman of Michigan is Hanley's choice for quarterback. The others and their prospective squad positions are: ends, Paul Moss, Purdue, and Dick Fencil, Northwestern; tackles, Joe Kurth, Notre Dame, and Marshall Wells, Minnesota; guards, Jim Harris, Notre Dame, Dick Smith, Ohio State, and Bob Gonyea, Northwestern; center, John Oehler, Purdue, halfbacks, Ernest Rentner, Northwestern, and Gil Berry, Illinois; fullback, Roy Horstman, Purdue.

British Champ Beats Belgian

BRADFORD, England, Nov. 28—Larry Gains, Toronto negro who holds the British empire heavyweight championship, knocked out the Belgian, Morat, in the first round of a 15-round bout here tonight. A hard right, 34 seconds after the fight started, ended matters. Morat was "out" for two minutes.

COLORFUL GRAPPLER HERE

Meet Dave Hider, a former neighbor of the Terrible Turk, as he comes from Syria. He isn't wearing it in this picture, but in the street he affects the unique headgear of his forefathers. He comes more recently from the eastern seaboard and is here to show Joe Gardinier, rough Portland wrestler, some new tricks at the armory tonight.

Hoop Practice Starts on "Blue Monday" For Holly, Perrine, Engle on Shelf

Coach Hollis Huntington of Salem high school, had something to be thankful for on Thanksgiving day, namely a gridiron victory over Chemawa Indian school. But the following Monday was quite noticeably "blue Monday" in his life, and the only thing he could find to be thankful for was that there were no basketball games in sight for nearly a month.

At the opening turnout for the red and black hoopers, the situation looked exceedingly bleak; in addition to the absence of four regulars from last year's team including two all-state men and two others who had been mainstays of the Salem high offense and defense, for three years, two of the men who had been counted on to take major roles in this year's campaign were also missing.

They were Melvin Engle, a prospect for first string center, and Johnny Perrine, a forward. And the reason for their absence was that they were casualties of the deadly-earned grid victory over Chemawa. Perrine, his leg in a cast to insure rapid recovery from his injury, will be kept out of practice for perhaps 10 days. But Engle, who fractured his collar bone, will not be able to turn out for basketball practice for at least six weeks, possibly two months. And, though a promising player, his experience has been so limited that he was in need of a lot of basket-shooting practice early this season to qualify him for the difficult pivot job. So he will be under a severe handicap when he does turn out.

Nevertheless, while looking over a turnout of 30-odd players unusually lacking in men of recognized ability, Huntington showed no signs of being down-hearted. In his preliminary talk to the squad he mentioned that Salem high has never had a weak basketball team, and he didn't expect this season to be any exception.

"Holly" stressed the need for players, performing under his system which emphasizes speed, to be in good condition, and remarked that he didn't see any men there who were so good the team couldn't get along without them if they failed to observe training

SATURDAY TILT HAS LIMELIGHT

Trojans Will be Recognized As Champs if They win Over Notre Dame

By ALAN GOULD
NEW YORK, Nov. 28—(AP)—As a result of what happened to the crack football team of the Army right out in view of 80,000 cash and chilly customers, it may not be necessary to wait until the new year to determine the so-called national intercollegiate champion of 1932.

Southern California's Trojans clinched this distinction last season by disposing of Tulane in the Rose Bowl game New Year's day. The Trojans are unbeaten this year and will represent the far west again in the holiday intercollegiate classic at Pasadena January 2. But they are listed meanwhile to entertain Notre Dame in the Olympic stadium December 10, and if the Southern Californians can whip the green jerseyed horde that overran West Point Saturday they won't have to worry about any other brand of opposition.

The east has seen some startling football this year, including Army's 46-0 slaughter of Harvard, Colgate's 21 to 0 triumph over Brown and Pittsburgh's dazzling finish for a 12 to 0 victory over this same Notre Dame team, but nothing to compare with the Rambler rout of one of West Point's greatest teams, Square Accounts With First Enemy.

Notre Dame apparently keyed itself for revenge this year. The Ramblers were unbeaten through three straight campaigns until they were knocked off by Southern California last season and then whipped by the Cadets. Taking their conquerors in the reverse order the "Irish" have now squared accounts with the Army. Salient effects of the weekend's football blast include:

(1) The possibility of a sell out crowd of over 100,000 paying patrons for the Notre Dame-Southern California game in the Olympic stadium;

(2) A sharp readjustment of prospects for the classic Army-Navy game Saturday in Philadelphia, which winds up the eastern season; and

(3) The first big vote of confidence in the coaching administration of H. (Hunk) Anderson, Notre Dame's head coach, who has been a target for the "anvil chorus" ever since Knute Rockne died.

Hoopers Out At W.U. But No Regulars

Following Monday's first official turnout of candidates the prospect for this season's Willamette university basketball team could no more be diagrammed than they could a month ago when few fans were thinking anything about the subject.

The squad worked out for just an hour Monday afternoon, that being all the time the coaching staff could find on a busy gymnasium schedule. About 20 aspirants for places on the varsity squad turned out, including not one who was quite a "regular" last year.

Men with varsity experience who did turn out were Rieke and Connors, centers; Hartley, guard; Burdette and Griffith, Gus Moore, who played portions of nearly all games last season, will not be able to report.

The only development noticeable Monday was that big McKerrow, who turned in some valuable work as a tackle during the football season though almost entirely without experience, revealed that he knows a great deal more about basketball. He is so tall that he appears to toss the ball downward instead of upward into the basket, and if he reverses the necessary speed, may turn out to be a valuable man.

First he will compete in the San Francisco Open, December 7 to 12; then in order the Pasadena Open, December 16 to 18; the Glendale Open, December 24 to 26; the Santa Monica Amateur and Professional, December 30 to January 1; the Los Angeles Open January 7 to 9 and the Agua Caliente Open, January 11 to 14. The last two mentioned are the big ones. Here's luck to you, Frank.

Weather conditions hereabouts have been favorable for golf practically all the time this fall; neither of the local courses has become so wet as to handicap play when rain wasn't actually falling.

Nevertheless there is some falling off in use of the courses, due perhaps to lack of formal competition. The Illahee President's cup race is about completed and Salem Golf club's ditto was over several weeks ago.

Which reminds us that for some reason not reported to us, the two clubs have not competed in team matches for the last two seasons. Maybe if they decided to renew hostilities and battle for the local supremacy sometime this winter, it would revive some of that interest and help some of the boys to keep in form during the "off" season.

We've never seen it tried or even suggested before, but we wonder if this wouldn't be an interesting contest: one in which every member of each club was required to compete? Supposing one club has a bigger membership than the other, it would be necessary for some fellows on the smaller club to play two matches,

In the Golf Spotlight

By HARDIN BURNLEY

As soon as Florida's Miami Biltmore golf classic is over, the professional golfers will turn to California for the next couple of months in order to take part in the annual winter tourneys at San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Agua Caliente and other points west.

There will be a total of about $25,000 in prize money for the pros to shoot at on the California circuit this season, which is not so much when compared to the gala year of $100,000 not so long ago, but which is nothing to sniff at in these times.

Naturally, only a small number of the pros who make the annual winter pilgrimage enjoy a profitable tour. In each tourney only a small number finish in the money, and the rest are just playing for exercise. Nevertheless, the keen competition on the winter circuit is usually of inestimable value in keeping a pro's game on edge, while the young golfers always have a chance to make a name for themselves by coping one or two of the big tourneys.

Horton Smith sprang into fame several years ago by cleaning up several winter tournaments, and Horton is back in harness this season, after being laid up with an injury most of the year.

Probably the attention of most people will be centered on the play of Olin Dutra this winter. This colorful golfer has been seen in the history of that ancient game when he went on a rampage last summer,

Frank Shafer, who was one of the best of Salem's amateur golfers before he turned pro, has decided to go out after the prize money that is hanging up in the big-time competition, we are informed. In between lessons and other duties out at the Illahee club, he has found time for some intensive practice recently, and on Friday will depart for sometimes sunny California, where he is entered in six tournaments.

First he will compete in the San Francisco Open, December 7 to 12; then in order the Pasadena Open, December 16 to 18; the Glendale Open, December 24 to 26; the Santa Monica Amateur and Professional, December 30 to January 1; the Los Angeles Open January 7 to 9 and the Agua Caliente Open, January 11 to 14. ## Death Toll of Football is Less Than in 1931; Junior Players Have Largest List

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—(AP)—Despite added safeguards in the rules and again took heavy toll of football players in the United States during the season dragging to a close, records today showing 38 succumbed to injuries.

With most high school schedules completed, the death toll for the year probably will fall well below the record number of 60 fatally injured in 1931, but the present figure is the second greatest for any year since national records were kept. Up to 1931 the largest number was 20 in 1925.

Of the 37 dead, five were college players, 17 high school and 15 sandlot, semi-pro and club team competitors.

The new rules, passed last spring and designed to ward against any such casualty list as that of last year, seemed to have been successful in organized college and university conferences where games were played under stricter officiating and better coaching. Reports on sandlots, neighborhood and some high school games, however, indicated some of the deaths might have been avoided if there had been closer adherence to rules and better medical supervision.

Although five college players died of football injuries, only one was hurt during a regularly scheduled game—Ralph McClure, of Colorado college, whose neck was broken in a game against the University of Colorado. The other college players who died all were injured in inter-class games or in practice.

John Panek, captain of the Denver university team, died Saturday, of influenza and general infection, but university authorities said his football playing was not responsible.

It has been estimated that at least 400,000 high school boys play the game each year on organized school teams, 50,000 on college teams and unestimated thousands more on semi-pro, municipal and unorganized neighborhood teams.

In organized professional football, where the game is played under the old rules as the "dead ball" and flying wedges, flares and blocks are allowed, there were no fatalities or even serious injuries. The players there, however, are more mature and injured men seldom go into the game.

DALLAS GRADS WIN OVER INDEPENDENCE

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 28—This year seems to be one of luck for the football teams of Dallas. To climax them all the alumni of Dallas defeated the alumni of Independence 6-0 here Sunday afternoon. The game was for the benefit of independent charities, and a large crowd attended.

The teams played an even game throughout, giving Independence the slight advantage on gaining yards. Independence threatened the Dallas goal three times with Dallas almost crossing the Independence goal once. Each time the balls were forfeited after the fourth down. The Dallas score came in the last minute of play, when a Dallas man intercepted and raced 50 yards for the touchdown. The kick for the conversion point failed.

Players for Independence were Lewis, Melvin and Bob Kelley, Fred Harp, Ed Harding, Herb Burch, Bill Becken, Glen Mattison, Rodney Hardman, Dorman Newton, Frances Newton, Vincent Johnson, Jack Fluke, Kenneth Roney, Harvey Yung, Martin Pressler, and Dick Slazer.

Tommy Paul is Given Technical Kayo Over Geno

CHICAGO, Nov. 28—(AP)—Tommy Paul of Buffalo, N. Y., recognized by the National Boxing association as featherweight champion, was awarded a technical knockout victory over young Geno, La Salle, Ill., in the third round of a ten-round bout at White City tonight.

After easily outscoring Geno in the first two rounds, Paul clipped him with a right uppercut early in the third. Geno went down, bounced up without a count, but dropped again without being hit. The referee disqualified Geno, and awarded the bout to Paul. Each weighed 126½ pounds, a half-pound over the division limit.
