Optimism for Future Seen By Speaker at C. of C. Luncheon Monday

Although statistics show that production of walnuts will not overrun consumption for another 25 years, considerable optimism for the future of the nut industry in Oregon over the future in California, the greatest competitor, was predicted by W. G. Brown, president of the western growers' association, in an address at the chamber of commerce luncheon yesterday noon.

IT promises to be a busy day at the capitol today, with the possible decision on an extra session of the legislature, following the governor's tax conference. Also there will be a board of control meeting as well as several other events to attract the interest of the public. Yesterday it was indeed quiet.

Governor Meier spent a busy day in his Portland offices during the day still battling with the serious financial condition of the state. Whether or not he will call a special session may be decided before long. In the meantime the regular session is scheduled to start just five weeks from yesterday.

The superintendent of buildings has his crew busy getting the house and senate rooms, cloak rooms, committee rooms and a thousand and one details taken care of for the session of the 1933 legislature. In fact the crew is so busy it apparently has forgotten about a Christmas tree for the capitol building. The lobby still is bare.

It won't be long now before the press gang will be moved out of the press room into the lobby to make room for the judicial committee. But the lobby is apparently the press room during the legislature, at least it always has been, and there will be plenty of typewriters sounding off.

The broadcast of the opening session of the national conference yesterday reminded one of the world series or something if one happened to be downtown. Crowds around radio stations were intent while the vote on the repeal resolution was in progress, and exclamations of both disgust and pleasure were heard when the defeat was announced.

So it looks like nationally there will be no beer by Christmas, which according to some would rob some cheer from the occasion. However, judging from all appearances, the action of congress would have made little difference as far as having beer or any other liquid refreshments was concerned—much to the loss of law adherence.

And now they are mentioning President Hoover for a job as president of Harvard university. After being president of everything in the United States, it must be a comedown to be president of a university. But if he really needs the job, which is doubted, he probably would do as much good as head of the school as any other they might select.

Tragedy struck at a Salem home Sunday night with the news that Miss Letha Driscoll, 32, was found dead at San Francisco. She was a step-daughter of Sheriff Oscar Bower. Many Salem people remembered her as a beautiful girl. Mrs. Florence Bell, one of the capitol press gang, said they attended school together and that she was very pretty.

COLLEGE LEADERS TO GATHER TODAY

Representatives of approximately 50 colleges and organizations will meet here today for the purpose of discussing a free study and reading course in connection with the state library.

The meeting was called by Miss Harriet Long, state librarian. Miss Long said the demands upon the state library had increased materially during the past two years, and that hundreds of requests for books were being received daily. Books dealing with practical subjects appear to be the most attractive, she declared.

Miss Long is especially interested in providing a free reading course for young men and women who, because of existing financial conditions, have been compelled to leave school. She indicated that the course could be provided without additional expense to the state library.
