The delegations were selected previously and marched ahead of the parade proper, closely surrounded by police and firemen on police duty. They even proceeded in uniform similar to those of soviet police.

While waiting for their comrades to return, the marchers entertained themselves and spectators by chanting "International" and "We demand unemployment insurance" shouted the marchers.

The appropriation for health service, subject last year for lively discussion, was questioned only by Mr. Hunt, who declared he didn't see where value was received. Directors B. F. Pound and Mrs. Roy S. Keene spoke up for the health service pointing out that it was a preventive rather than a curative agency and that it had been especially valuable to the school system in greatly decreasing pupil absence on account of illness and check disease epidemic.

Dr. H. H. Olinger, school board chairman, and W. H. Burghardt, clerk, were elected to represent the taxpayers' meeting.

OTTO KLETT BUYS GRAY BELLE BLOCK

One of the largest downtown real estate deals made here in the past two years was announced yesterday, the sale of the Gray Belle building, 440-44 State street, by Fred Thielsen to Otto Klett, who already held several pieces of business district property. The consideration was said to be $60,000, and the deal handled through W. H. Grabenhorst & Co. The building has a 42-foot frontage on State street and a depth of 149 feet. Thielsen had been the owner of property involved for the past six years and for many years before that owned the portion that adjoins the alley. He purchased the inside section of the building from Curtis B. Cross about six years ago.

Klett said that he made the purchase because he considered this one of the choicest pieces of downtown property and because he had faith in Salem real estate as an investment.

The ground floor of the building is occupied by the recently reopened Gray Belle restaurant and the Morris Optical company. The second floor is used for a photograph studio and offices.

A warn. spot in the state was Brownsville, where spring flowers were reported in bloom.

DAVIDSON DIRECTS CHURCH MUSIC HERE

Loren Davidson, director of music for the First Christian church and until late last month of Pendleton, has opened a studio in connection with his church work, he announced yesterday.

While in Pendleton, he organized and directed the Pendleton Civic Choral club and the Pendleton Gleemen, producing the opera, "Marta" and "The Seven Last Words," as well as giving several concerts. He went to Pendleton from Eugene, where he was musical supervisor in one of the high schools while working for his master's degree in music from the University of Oregon.

He studied, while still in high school, under Agnes Middleton, sister of the famous maestro, Arthur Middleton, and later with Mrs. E. M. Tilton. He studied at the Simpson college conservatory of music under Arthur Boardman and Lester Spring, and later in Chicago under the Italian master, Vittorio Trevison. He has sung the tenor role in several outstanding operas, including "Marta," "Aida," "Bohemian Girl" and "Chimes of Normandy."

BANQUET ENJOYED BY NUT GROWERS

Good fellowship abounded at the banquet of the western nut-growers at the Marion hotel last night. An interesting program was arranged with some novelty features, including an "Amos and Andy" take-off on the leading growers who were present. Tommy Luke of Portland led the company in singing. Judge George Rossman presided as toastmaster. Among those introduced were four veterans of walnut culture in this part of the country: Charles Trunk of Dundee, Fred Groner of Scholls station, A. A. Quarburg of Vancouver, and George Dorris of Springfield.

Pictures of Europe including scenes in French walnut orchards were shown by Ferd Groner. He took them on a recent trip to Europe.

The speaker of the evening was Frank Branch Riley, famed orator of the Oregon country, whose word pictures held the company captivated as he sketched the glories of commonwealth.

Poachers Caught By Yankee Force And Later Freed

MANILA, Wednesday, Dec. 7.—(AP)—Thirty four Japanese fishermen, seized as "poachers" off the coast of northern Luzon, December 4, after being fired at by the coast guard cutter Arrayat were released today into the custody of Japanese Consul Kimura who said he would return them to Japan.

The fishermen said they misunderstood the signals of the Arrayat at halt. Others said they did not present a defense and praised the treatment they received at the hands of authorities.

WOODBURN'S BOARD WINS ON DEMURRER

Jones Given Land; Court Here Hands Decisions On Many Cases

Judge L. G. Lowellling dispensed justice with a rapid hand yesterday disposing of a score of cases which had been pending before him. Perhaps the most important litigation determined was that of Paul Folquet, Jr., executor of the estate of Paul Folquet, Sr. The younger Folquet sued the Woodburn school board, seeking enforcement of a bus contract made with the father. The court sustained a demurrer made by the board to Folquet's complaint on the ground that the agreement was a personal one on which the board depended on the senior man's ability and carelessness and hence the contract could not be assigned.

Ronald Jones was given possession of land leased to Roy K. Fukuda, Japanese. The court cited in the Oregon alien land law in support of his decision and also said the fact Fukuda had not paid rentals constituted a breach. Other opinions rendered by the court were:

Grace L. Beaman vs. Isabella Falkland, decision for plaintiff in suit for cancellation of real estate contract.

Theodora C. Zosel vs. LaVerne Winkler, plea in abatement denied. This is a suit for foreclosure.

Anna Barbara Becke vs. Fosbay Farms, Inc., decree for Elmer P. Rich who entered into the proceedings subsequent to the original filing being given leave to sue the receiver of Fosbay Farms, Virginia Maude Gorline vs. Walter Earle Sears, up on objections to cost bill, objections to defendant's cost bill allowed with certain exceptions.

State ex rel Clarence Donnelly vs. state industrial accident commission, motion to strike denied.

Henry Zollner vs. F. D. Kaser, demurrer overruled and 10 days given in which to plead further.

Virginia Maude Gorline vs. Walter Earle Sears, up on objections to cost bill, objections to defendant's cost bill allowed with certain exceptions.

Sarah J. Stangler vs. E. E. Eckbert, default decree set aside and order entered allowing answer to be filed. This decree was set aside due to difference in time allowed for serving summons in Washington state and Oregon.

Marion Automobile company against John McHolich, decree of $2900 for plaintiff against defendant McHolich and $1467.10 against Clackamas county. The defendant bought trucks to haul gravel in Clackamas county and suit was for payment on trucks.

Ball brothers vs. Associated Oil company, motion to strike overruled.

FIREMEN ARE BUSY REVIVING OLD TOYS

From all appearances, Santa Claus has moved his workshop from the North Pole to Salem fire stations. A visit to the stations yesterday revealed piles of toys, bright and colorful with fresh coats of paint, and other piles of play articles yet to be reconstructed, made like new.

The firemen, working away at their annual Christmas cheer task during the past month, already have sent several loads of toys to the Elks club, where they will be divided up and distributed by the Elks' cheer committee at Christmas time.

Neither little boys nor little girls will be left out in the distribution of toys if the firemen have any say about it. They are turning out quantities of wagons, scooters, mechanical toys, and building sets for the boys, and a large number of dolls for the girls. Wives of the firemen and other women in the city are planning to provide wardrobes for the girls and a half remaining, the firemen hope to produce many more toys and dolls. They have large supplies of old toys to work upon but can use up still more if townfolk provide them, they say, ersatz having old toys to give can get a fireman to come after them by calling any of the fire stations.

RED CROSS PLANS CHRISTMAS DINNER

With 700 families around Salem liable to go without a good Christmas dinner unless aid is given, the Red Cross here is undertaking to see that duplication of effort is avoided and all provided for, Miss Thora V. Boesen, executive secretary, announced yesterday.

"We should like to see that all have a pleasant Christmas and no duplication," she explained. "We are asking all organizations or individuals planning to do something for families to clear through the Red Cross. We'll try and see that all have something."

Already the American Legion and classes in the schools have announced plans to provide Christmas dinners. The Elks club cheer committee is working also and city firemen are rebuilding toys to go out with the Elks baskets.

New Christian Church at Dallas Dedicated Sunday With Crowds at Services

DALLAS, Dec. 6.—Dedication services at the Dallas Christian church were held Sunday, December 4, and brought together record breaking crowds for the various services. Many out of town people attended all the services which were held.

Dedication services were held at 11 o'clock under the direction of R. R. Imbler, chairman of the official board. Rev. K. E. Burke gave the sermon.

At the morning service the pastor read a list of those who had made gifts to the new church. Among these gifts were a grand piano, a large communion table, chairs, and a communion set. The communion set and chairs were presented by the Christian Board of Publication The Standard Publishing company, and nearby Christian churches of the Willamette valley. The presentation was made by Rex R. Dallas, of Albany, and was in honor of C. F. Swander, secretary of the state work of the Christian churches of Oregon for over a quarter of a century.

Other gifts to the church included the pulpit chairs, which were presented by the ministers and evangelists who have served the local church, a large American flag, and several other gifts from members of the congregation and friends.

The congregation at the afternoon communion service represented Christian churches from a territory bounded by Portland, Eugene, Silverton, and the Pacific coast. The pastor, K. E. Burke, introduced Rex Dallas who presented the communion set and Hugh G. Black, an elder in the church, was introduced by C. F. Swander who presided at the service. The communion meditation was delivered by Howard McConnell of Corvallis, former pastor of the Dallas church. Other visiting ministers who assisted in the service were: Rev. Guy R. Drill and Rev. Hugh McCallum of Salem and Rev. Edkins of Monmouth.

Both Christian Endeavor societies of the church held special services in the evening with record crowds attending.

A large part of the evening service was given over to violin solos by Mrs. Robert Fisher and songs by the Gospel Jubilee male quartet. The pastor closed the services with a sermon on the topic "The Joy of Being a Christian."

The crowd which attended the Bible school session in the morning filled the building almost to capacity.

The new church has attracted state wide attention due to its unusual construction and beauty without following the usual designs for churches. It is a two story building with a full basement, and is of English manor design with the interior finished after a Gothic pattern.

The exterior is painted a light brown with a sanded finish, trimmed in dark brown. Windows and exterior lighting fixtures are of colored glass.

The walls of the interior are finished with a light brown stain covered with several coats of varnish to give it a very attractive appearance. Beams and pews are finished with a darker brown to give contrast to the walls.

In the chancel there are three large arches dividing the room into three parts. The choir occupies the space to the west, the communion table the central arch, and the space for the organ is in the east arch. Wide steps lead up to the center arch and the communion table. The pulpit is built into the chancel railing and is to the left of the communion table.

Six large lanterns are suspended from the ceiling in the main auditorium, with bracket lamps along the walls. The lights for the choir and pulpit are concealed above the chancel.

In addition to the seats in the auditorium, the bible school and other department rooms on the first and second floors may be opened up to more than double the seating capacity of the room.

Rooms have been provided for all the classes and departments of the church. In this way the main auditorium is reserved for the regular church services.

There are two large rooms in the basement which make up the social hall and dining room. In addition to these rooms, the kitchen and heating plant are located in the basement. A stage and dressing room provide the necessary equipment for bible dramas and plays.

The drapes in the baptistry are of a deep red which make a fine setting for the picture of the Jordan river that is painted on the back wall of this room.

The entire structure is an example of the use of home products and the use of local labor. All materials which were available here were used in its construction with the other necessary materials being bought in Oregon.

John L. Rand, justice of the supreme court, will become chief justice January 1, 1933, Arthur G. Benson, clerk of the court, announced yesterday. He succeeds Henry J. Bean, who was reelected in November.

Chief justices of the court are selected every two years from those having the least time remaining to serve. If more than one have but two of their six year terms remaining, then the oldest in years is chosen for the honor.

Records show that 62 Oregon attorneys have been members of the state supreme court. At the time Oregon was admitted as a state in 1859, the court was composed of three justices. This number has now been increased to seven.
