ANGLO-PERSIAN OIL — NOT SO SOOTHING

SHAH OF PERSIA — GUSHER ON PERSIAN OIL FIELDS — SIR JOHN CADMAN

In a note to the British Government, "so offensive" that it could not be published, the Shah of Persia has defied Great Britain to do its darndest over the Persian Government's recent drastic action in cancelling the oil leases of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. The Shah intimated that if Britain makes a show of force it will take but a few well-aimed Persian shells to send millions of pounds worth of British oil property up in smoke. Sir John Cadman, chairman of the Anglo-Persian Company, challenges the legality of Persia's action, asserting that it constitutes a grave breach of contract and lays the whole trouble to the falling off of royalties paid to the Persian Government, due to the depression. The Shah says that royalties have nothing to do with the cancellation of the concessions, but bases his country's case on arrears of royalties, going back to 1905, which, he claims, the British company has wrongfully withheld from Persia. Meanwhile, Russia is busy to the effect that Soviet Russian influence is responsible for the trouble. It is known that the Soviet has been desirous of acquiring the valuable oil concessions held by Britain and had offered every possible inducement to Persia to terminate the agreement and so secure the oil wells for itself.
