Turkey Arrivals Better Cared for On Portland Mart

PORTLAND, Dec. 17.—(AP)—With turkey shipments continuing to the south and the northern movement getting under way, the local market's arrivals were being better taken care of during the day, but at extreme low prices. Retailers are in many instances being supplied direct by producers at prices even lower than what wholesalers were obtaining, thereby creating additional pressure against the market. This together with consignments offered retail by distributors, is not conducive to improving the price situation.
