GARY, Ind., Jan. 31. — (AP) — Four gunmen today held up the state automobile license bureau and escaped with between $1000 and $8000.

The bandits forced 30 customers to line up, faces to the wall, while W. J. O'Donnell, bureau manager, handed over receipts. The gunmen then commanded the customers to empty their pockets. They contributed an estimated $200.

The Capitol Battlefront

Incidents and Personalities More or Less Connected With the State Legislature and Its Achievements

A lanky, rawhide type of fellow is G. W. Manning, sheriff of Yamhill county, over to the legislature for a visit Tuesday. Manning gets things done, he is a good administrator, his collections and he ranks among the best sheriffs in the state in law enforcement. Manning reported that he has accepted part-payments on taxes for years and quarterly payment laws will not help Yamhill county citizens now although Manning thinks the law as it affects other counties would be good. The 1932 tax roll is 35 per cent delinquent but Manning thinks money to pay this is held by many farmers who are delaying payment day, hoping interest will be waived by the legislature. He does not favor such action.

Over from Chehalis valley comes John U. Smith who loves politics as much as he does his walnut trees. Smith, who once practiced law in Honolulu, greatly delights in the republican party, usually is chairman or speaker at rallies and always is rallying around in county or state wire-pulling. He is a great friend of the late Governor Patterson and helped line up the votes for him in 1926.

Each day demonstrates the fact that the ex-legislators are like they are. Back B. L. Eddy of Roseburg has kept busy at the law until prohibition came up for a hearing, and presto, he was here at Salem, this time appearing before a committee instead of sitting on it. Yesterday came one "Pat" Gallagher who in yesterday used to come to Salem from Ontario and sound a raucous voice through the house. Now he is among the thousands of law practitioners in Portland and doing very nicely. His friends report. Came also the redoubtable Joe Bennett, now a Portland commissioner and now an advocate of scrip money. Barbershop comment has it that Bennett dropped numerous votes in Portland recently when he refused to cast the critical vote for repeal of city prohibition ordinances.

Stand on the third floor of the capitol rotunda and you can readily feel a tremor when any considerable number of people pass over the tile floors. The stairway to the third floor likewise will shake perceptibly with little urging. The truth of it is that the statehouse is not as young as it once was, some 63 years having passed by since work was started upon it. Contractor Elixo of Salem did some rejuvenation work on the second floor a year or so ago.

The inverted dome seen from the lobby is white in color tinged with gold but underneath the white paint lies a story for a white paint. The dome was a riot of gold-leaf. Sam Koser was then secretary of state and building custodian and he gave orders that the gold should be covered up. It was, but were there protests! Some of the old timers felt as badly as though the dome had been taken down! In passing: The trip to the conning tower atop the dome is still popular and until 4 p.m. daily the elevator operator is accustomed to taking couples to the fourth floor whence the stairs are climbed to the top of the dome. One couple remarked yesterday that the climb to the top was "nice and dark."

One prominent legislative observer remarked Tuesday that the writer of this column certainly "knew nothing of what is going on and was exceedingly dull." The accusation was a worthy one. The first part of the accusation equally fits most legislators; the second holds similarly true of the average committee hearing.

A black bow tie, a turndown collar, a lean figure, an evidenced acquaintance with the bulk of legislators: these are the distinguishing characteristics of Seymour Jones, a familiar of many sessions. Years ago he was speaker of the house, then a possible candidate for governor, an aspiration he relinquished to support I. L. Patterson, the latter making Jones his state market agent. Jones went out in the Meier freshets of 1931 and like Cincinnati returned to his plow which he quite occasionally drops to appear at tax meetings urging lighter tax burdens for farmers and through lessened governmental costs. Before coming to Oregon, Jones was counsel for a railroad company in Chicago.

Representative Hilton was not commended in a recent issue of The Oregon Voter yesterday.

Judge Cites Constitution, Colonial Precedent, to Prove Contentment

"The constitution denies you the right, directly or indirectly, to diminish the salary of a judge during his term of office," writes Judge Earl C. Laurrette in a letter to Representative F. Allen and Senator H. C. Wheeler, joint chairmen of the ways and means committee of the legislature. "I reserve the right to refund to the state as I have in the past, such portion of my salary as seems proper, free from any dictation or proposals by a coordinate branch of government."

The judge's extended letter cites a series of legal precedents and statements, largely of federal cases, where the necessity of preserving a free, uncontrolled judiciary is made paramount in a democratic government. He declares that the principal grievance of the early colonists was that King George could command the terms and payment of judges and thus control colonial government.

Hamilton Quoted
Judge Laurrette quotes Alexander Hamilton as follows: "Next to permanency in office, nothing can contribute more to the independence of the judges than a fixed provision for their support; a power over a man's sustenance amounts to a power over his will."

The Oregon City jurist further declares: "Reduced to simple language, if influential legislators could diminish the salaries of judges, will, mark the disaster the last forlorn would have in litigation against such legislators. Consider the advantages of an attorney, who might also be a member of the ways and means committee, in appearing before judges whose subsistence might be destroyed in case of an adverse decision."

Addressing the Columbia Institute of Arts and Sciences, the treasury secretary said: "While inflation at some stages in the process appears to correct some of the evils arising during a period of deflation—all experience teaches that whatever the earlier appearance may be, all classes are ultimately adversely affected and eventually it results in ruin to the economic life of a nation and brings terrible disaster to all its people."

"Visit those countries of Europe which, through force of circumstance rather than choice, experienced the panacea of inflation," he added, "and you will find they fear inflation more than any other economic phenomena."

Declaring that "we have had a sound currency for so long that we take the soundness of money for granted," Mills said it "is difficult for us to picture the ruinous effects of currency depreciation."

STAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31. — (AP) — John Aasen, eight feet nine inches in height and weighing 460 pounds, who has to have everything made to order except collar buttons, needs an oversize hospital.

Aasen, a former motion picture player, was found semi-conscious in his hotel room yesterday, and taken to the detention hospital. Removed to the San Francisco hospital today, physicians and nurses pushed three beds together, sewed several sheets and blankets to each other, made him comfortable as best they could and then tried to find out what was the matter with him. A squad of nurses was necessary.

Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health officer, said apparently the chemical balance of the man's overgrown body has been overthrown by dysfunction of the pituitary gland at the base of the brain.

"In other words," he said, "his system has not been given sufficient extract from the ductless pituitary gland. It was this gland that caused his growth, and now, having worked overtime, is exacting its toll."

G. Wells' eerie novel of experiment and adventure, which opens at the Capitol today for a three day showing.

The "Panther Woman" is one of the most important characters in the story of the skilled scientist driven half-mad by his frantic desire to turn animals into men. She is the most perfect, the most successful of his creations.

Ernst Lubitsch's "Trouble in Paradise," brilliant farce featuring Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis, Herbert Marshall, Charlie Ruggles and Edward Everett Horton, which opens a two day engagement today at the Elsinore theatre, is based on a play by Laszlo Aladar, Viennese playwright, which scored a sensational success in several European capitals.

The trouble with American jails, according to Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, who have gone in for prison reform in a big cinematic way, is that they are not conducted to attract the best classes of people.

Since playing in RKO-Radio Pictures, "Hold 'Em Jail," now showing at the Hollywood theatre, these two comedians have done some heavy thinking — on their own time, of course — regarding the penal situation.

present costs until completion. "Furthermore, the settlers in numerous privately projected irrigation districts of this state are on the verge of being forced out of their homes because of inadequate water supply due to lack of storage and depreciation of distribution facilities, and a supplemental water supply can be made readily available by the federal reclamation bureau.

"Delay in completion of the projects already begun by the federal government and the falling of federal government to undertake much needed projects to rehabilitate worthy enterprises will result in direct and indirect increase of unemployment to the extent of thousands of men in Oregon; in depreciation and loss of enterprises already constructed, and in severe hardship to the people and communities who have staked all in the belief that the federal government will complete that which it has undertaken. The enactment by congress of Senate bills Nos. 5417 and 5471 has, therefore, a bearing on the welfare of many thousands of Oregon citizens."

Science Test of Healers Argued
Hearing on the so-called fundamental science bill which would compel medical practitioners to pass examinations in five sciences, drew a large audience in the hearing rooms of the capitol Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Dammasch, chairman of the committee and author of the bill, presided. Chiropractors and naturopaths and other citizens opposed the measure while a diversified group of representatives of other organizations and the medical profession urged its passage. A similar bill is said to have been enacted into law in 33 states.

Relating to the making of checks to be used by injured workmen under the workmen's compensation act. The bill, H. R. 124, was passed by the senate 72-14. LIFETIME HOME IS OFFERED M. DAVIE

At the business meeting of Turner Christian church Sunday, January 22, the official board voted unanimously to offer a lifetime home free of charge to Miss Mary Davie. The church specified certain rooms with private entrance and plumbing, which may be shut off from all other parts of the house but which are a part of the Davie home. By the terms of the will of the late Mrs. C. A. Davie the home is the parsonage of the church. The house is surrounded by a beautiful flower garden. Part of this garden is known as Miss Davie's garden and the church also offers this to her for use during the balance of her life. The apartment is ample and convenient and has a beautiful front. The church is making this offer as a matter of good will and not of obligation.

Rev. Elmore J. Gilstrap is pastor of the church, and for the last three and a half years has taken a great pride in the appearance of the church grounds. The parsonage and church grounds are adjacent, therefore the landscaping of one is complimentary to the other. The Gilstrap family at present lives in the Mill Creek Home which is being conducted by the pastor.

Many of Primary Children Absent At Grant School

Seventy-one pupils were absent from Grant school, most of them believed suffering from measles, according to Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, city health officer. An epidemic of the disease in Grant and Highland school student bodies is expected.

Dr. Douglas reiterated warning to parents to keep their children at home if the latter have severe colds since the ailment is liable to be the initial stage of measles. "Keep them in bed and call a doctor," he advised.

Senate joint memorial 3 calling upon congress to provide federal machinery for telephone holding company regulation was referred to committee upon motion of Representative Loneragan. Representative Dickson, nephew of Senator Dickson, who introduced the resolution, supported Loneragan's motion for referring the resolution.
