Mrs. Hicks asserted that it was cheaper to furnish bus transportation than to educate children in small rural high schools; and compared high school bus costs with those for delinquency. The matter. John Gary, superintendent of the West Linn schools, related the advantages which accrued from the organized system of transporting students, some of them for 25 miles.

Frank Davey, veteran legislator, closed the case for the foes of transportation. His oratory drew fire and sharp rejoinder. The gallery protested at some of his assertions but Davey gallantly held his ground.

Acrimony developed as the meeting closed and Chairman Childs had to rap vigorously for order. Farmers cried down farmers, big taxpayers charged the little taxpayers with loading the cost on them. The beer hearing did not draw as large a crowd nor excite as much interest and controversy as the one last night.

"Practically all of the unlicensed cars are in the small car class paying an annual fee of from $10.00 to $20.00. On April 1st these cars pay only a quarter fee under the present law. The contemplated law merely anticipates by six weeks the quarterly payment.

"This plan will put these cars on the highway NOW and will greatly enlarge the field of the jobless man in his search for employment, will greatly facilitate the convenience of the farmer and during his spring activities, and will bring added revenues to the state."

Their routine disrupted, Miss Wilson, Miss Parker and Miss Norma Sutherland, the other relief office worker, were unable to complete interviews with the day's list of needy persons.

Two weeks later another group of men stormed the office and demanded that they be given priority over others awaiting requisitions.

Since the latter episode occurred, a city policeman has been stationed at the office several hours each day.

A preamble to the resolution sets forth that "There are certain mortgage or contract holders, who, notwithstanding conditions now existing, proceed to foreclosure on default in the terms thereof even though the mortgagor or purchaser is making bona fide efforts to pay, and it being deemed that foreclosures in such cases are contrary to sound public policy."

LUDANEY TRIAL TO RUN ANOTHER DAY

Trial in case of Frank Ludaney, accused of attempted assault, will continue in circuit court today, and will likely take the full day. Most of yesterday afternoon was consumed in an attorney's session in the judge's chambers over admissibility of evidence.

Evidence in question had to do with alleged confession of Ludaney. It is understood the confession will not be introduced when the case continues this morning but that purport of the confession will be admitted through testimony.

The state will call five more witnesses before its case is rested, and the defense is expected to call a number.
