Che Oregon Statesman

"No Favor Sways Us; No Fear Shall Awe" From First Statesman, March 28, 1851

THE STATESMAN PUBLISHING CO. SHELDON F. SACKETT - - - - Managing Editor

Member of the Associated Press The Associated Press is exclusively entitled to the use for publica-tion of all news dispatches credited to it or not otherwise credited in this paper.

ADVERTISING Portland Representative Gordon B. Bell, Security Building, Portland, Ora. Eastern Advertising Representatives Bryant, Griffith & Brunson, Inc., Chicago, New York, Detroit, Boston, Atlanta.

Entered at the Postoffice at Salem, Oregon, as Second-Class Matter. Published every morning except Monday. Business office, 215 S. Commercial Street.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:

Mail Subscription Rates, in Advance. Within Oregon: Daily and Sunday, 1 Mo. 50 cents; 3 Mo. $1.25; 6 Mo. $2.25; 1 year $4.00. Elsewhere 50 cents per Mo., or $5.00 for 1 year in advance.

By City Carrier: 45 cents a month; $5.00 a year in advance.

Per Copy 2 cents. On trains and News Stands 5 cents.

Reorganization Expenses

REAT corporations like railroads which get in financial I straits are seldom junked. They operate under receivers for a time. During this period interest saved by non-payment tation. It is admitted to have is used to build up the property and make it more nearly self-supporting. After a time, long or short, interested persons appear as reorganization managers. Usually some prixate banking house is appointed. The managers study the condition of the company, its probable rate of earnings, and then call for an exchange of securities.

This is often marked by "scaling down", in which bond holders are asked to take securities with a junior standing. The way is then open to put on prior mortgages to raise fresh capital. In the case of railroads there has been in past reorganizations practically no real scaling down of capitalization. Whatever was taken out of the bond account was added to the stock account, so the mountain of capital the property is expected to produce earnings upon remains unchanged, though the stock may pay no dividends for a time.

Then for their job the reorganization managers get very fat fees, and usually get nibbs on the sale of new securities. In the Milwaukee reorganization a few years ago the much out of balance as they are bankers got around two million for their services.

The interstate commerce commission now comes forward with a plea to break up this costly method of reorganization. There are bills pending in congress to permit railroads and other corporations to reorganize without the agonies which have attended past receiverships. The legislative committee of the commission urges action to curb the that we might well take into conpower of the bankers over the railroads and suggests a special court or a department of the interstate commerce

Corporate reorganizations have been painful and costly, needlessly so, it would appear; although so diverse are interests involved and so complex the legal questions that expert minds are required or the job will be bungled. It seems certain that many of the railroads will have to have their | ment of these advantages. fixed charges reduced. The government cannot and should not continue to pour money into leaking ships. As the em- the general economic laws, must West Roseburg was built, where ergency prolongs into an epoch the realities of the situation must needs be faced. If the readjustment process can be altered so that time and money may be saved it will be in the ed the free operation of the law home is now going up, for the interest of the investors, the shippers, and the general public. The LaGuardia bill, along lines which Pres. Hoover approves, would permit such voluntary reorganization.

Erasing Great Fortunes

WHAT the parlor pinks and the soapbox reds and the congressional chiselers failed to accomplish in the reduction of enormous fortunes is being effected through the steady attrition of business forces. This is brought to light in the report on the estate of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller Mc-Cormick. In her latter months she vacated her mansion and died in an apartment. Her estate was computed at $40,000,-800 at one time. Now the executors say there isn't enough left to pag $2000 a month for the settlement with Emil Krenn, the Swiss architect whom she made residuary leg-

Her Standard Oil stocks, the gift of her father, were sold long ago. Her real estate investments turned out badly and her properties are cumbered with mortgages. Death gave her release from her financial troubles, though her father would not have permitted her to suffer. Her brother, John D., Jr. however has sunk a quarter billion in Radio City in New York, and "sunk" seems to be the appropriate word. The income cannot possibly carry the investment charges, at least for many years to come.

The papers tell also of the erasure of another large family fortune,—the Stevens family in Chicago, whose big hotels, the Stevens and LaSalle are in receivership and whose big insurance company is in the hands of the courts. Three of the family are under indictment. Aside from whatever crimes may have been committed stands the fact that their fortune is gone.

Depressions are like that. Those who have lose all or part of their possessions. A real "new deal" is forced; and the folk who browse among the ruins and pick up real bargainst are the ones swept into fortune on the next incoming tide. One of the yarns told about the late George F. Baker, a financial giant in the land, was that when the panic broke in 1929 he called out his car to be taken again to his office, remarking: "This is my ninth panic; I have made money in all of them. Perhaps he had, but his estate has suffered heavy shrinkage since his death a short time ago. Even his impregnable bank transferred 25 million from its account of the scarcity of gold itsurplus as reserves against losses last year.

Maybe the Hebrews had the right plan. Every fifty years they had a year of jubilee in which debtors were reeased and lands reverted to ancestral family ownership. We beat the Hebrews though because we have our panics more frequently and they do not stop when a twelve-month is up.

"Bank of Oregon"

WHILE Oregon is getting down on its knees asking doles of bankers to meet paychecks for stenographers and filing clerks, a brace of legislators-Zimmerman and Oleen are proposing legislation to put the state in the banking business. One bill creates a bank for all public funds to be reloaned back to governmental units. The other is a consti- as a price or value on money extutional amendment to let the state go into the general

Oregon has made a glowing success of all the ventures it has engaged in. The irrigation districts with their her- loy, of which the dollar is made itage of defaulted bonds and blasted hopes of settlers testify to false promises of promoters and visionary enthusiasm of the suckers. Veteran loans made at a 75% valuation in boom times are piling up a deficiency to be met by general tax-

If now the state will only go into the banking bus-iness the ruin will be completed. Hard-boiled bankers have found it impossible to avoid losses in making loans as the any other form of wealth. If I am series of bank failures testifies to. If now politics is mixed in borrowing in Oregon will be sweet as iong as it lasts.

If a few of the bills pass to put Oregon in business in a big way by running up bonded debt, driving out invested capital, and extinguishing poverty-ownership by confiscation this state will displace North Dakota as the fool of the family.

The Safety

Statesman Readers

Permanent Recovery by An Adequate Medium of Exchange To the Editor:

In your editorial in the Jan 14th issue of the Statesman you state, "The question on which we differ is whether the readjustment should come by inflating the currency or through the operation of general economic laws which slowly work out the equilibrium of prices".

To my mind the difference is more accurately stated in these words,-Should we establish a medium of exchange, redeemable in service, of strictly government issue and free from special privilege to any group, or should we continue to allow the impeditive drag of an old inadequate system to retard our progress and ad-

The present usury and credit system, founded on the primitive notion of the intrinsic value of money, has ignominiously failed as an equitable means of distributhus failed by great minds and leaders who, nevertheless, hold tenaciously to it as sound in prin-

To me there is a vast difference between an adequate medium of exchange and an "adequate supply of coinage and of federal re-general economic laws is slow in working out the equilibrium of prices, if, indeed, it does so at all. If this equilibrium of prices is worked out at all by this slow and doubtful method, it is of rather short duration compared to the unbalanced states caused by both high prices and low prices. We are apt to forget that during booming times prices are just as in times of depression. Should we wait for adjustment through the slow operation of economic laws which we have every reason to believe, from past experiences, will be only temporary? There seems to be a regularity in the recurrence of depressions sideration. Why resign the advantages gained through science and invention to the ruinous and demoralizing effects of an unbalanced economic state, the solution of which is no more beyond us that the difficulties already met and overcome in the achieve-

Our editor, when he refers to undisputable fact that "The love (ALL) evil." A root, watered and tem, which has grown to the full fruitage of banditry and crime.

The usury and credit system whose main support is selfishness, is a curse to the nation, a paralyzing check to the free operation of the law of supply and demand. It is a system that has been condemned by a great host of great minds of righteousness and logic down through the ages

The admonition, "owe no man anything," if strictly adhered to would soon destroy the usury system. But alas! our inordinate desire for living beyond our means has entangled most of us in the meshes of this system. Instead of blaming ourselves, where the sorts of things. Each group is den on another group who are as hard hit as themselves.

The unlimited coinage of gold is, in a measure, relieving the shortage of money to the individual. This relief, however, is self. Under the present systems and conditions this is the only (except by loans) that money can get into the hands of that vast throng of consumers of both goods and services necessary to bring equilibrium in the exchange of goods and ser-

In an editorial of Jan. 17th our editor says, "The price of gold being fixed, and now relatively high in terms of commodities,

The price of gold is fixed but is now high, seems to be a contradiction. There is no such thing cept in terms of commodities or services. Goods of any kind represent some kind of service. The commodities, silver and al-

Gold is a product of labor, representing the labor (or service) of mining and refining it. It is hard for me to see why the service (or labor) represented in the production of gold should be honored more than service (or labor) represented in the production of wrong regarding this, then the

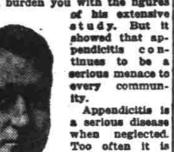

you say, Paper also has a com- years."

Daily Health Talks

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. resort to certain tests which confirm United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health,

NOT LONG age an eminent surgeon published an interesting and will not burden you with the figures confused with an ach ache" and the sufferer takes a cathartic for relief. This is indeed a dangerous procedure because if the pain is due increases the infiammation. If the inflammation continues, it may lead to rupture of the appendix. When this happens the pus contained within the appendix escapes into the abdominal cavity. This causes peritonitis which is a serious complication of appendicitis.

Avoid Cathartics Pain in the abdomes or stomach ache should never be considered too lightly. You will always be on the safe side if you avoid cathartics. Apply a hot water bag to the abdomen Heat usually relieves spasm and intestinal tenderness due to food poisoning or digestive upsets. If the pain is due to an inflamed appendix, relief will be obtained by in calling the doctor prolongs convalescence and increases the danger. Headache, nausea, fever, vomiting, constipation or diarrhes, are other But if it is suspected, the sufferer

When the doctor is in doubt he can of white cells in the blood is increased. This condition of the blood is spoken of as "leucocytosis". This instructive report on appendicitis. I is always found when infection is

> In what I have said I do not mean to imply, of course, that every stomach ache is due to appendicitia. But appendicitis is too frequently confused with stomach ache, and too many fatalities occur because of this

Remember these simple rules and whenever in doubt consult with your doctor. He has been trained in his work and will assume all the respon-

It is hoped that the general public ordinary "stomwill appreciate the efforts of the medical profession to enlighten the public. It is their endeavor to familiarize everyone with the signs of appendicitis. It is only by co-operation between the physician and the patient's family that the number of to an inflamed appendix the cathartic fatalities from appendicitis can be reduced to a minimum.

> Answers to Health Queries Mrs. F. H. Q.-What causes white atches on the hands? A .- This is usually due to loss of pigment or coloring matter. The cause is not known and there is no specific cure.

ing as cod liver oil? A .- Yes, but cod liver off is a Mrs. L. S. O. Q.-I am 28 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, what should an ice bag. Persistent pain demands I weigh? 2: Would yeast or cod immediate medical attention. Delay liver oil be good for gaining weight A.-You should weigh about 138 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of your age and height as determined by examination signs of appendicitis. A positive of a large number of people. A few diagnosis is often difficult to make. pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or ne significance. 2: Take cod liver off as a general tonic and builder. (Copyright, 1933, K. F. S., Inc.)

BITS for BREAKFAST

Former Oregon man is "going on" 100:

(Continuing from yesterday:) Giving up farming, Mr. Brown next rented a livery stable in Roseburg. Various causes made this a fluke. The fall of 1860. hunting-for something to make a living for himself and family, Brown rented the farm on which ean the law of supply and dethe soldiers' home for the state bought a load of bacon; had 360 man has instituted have obstruct- and the great regional veterans' of supply and demand. And, as federal government. In connection these economic laws are rules with the farm, Brown rented the and regulations instituted by ferry. He made rails on the farm man, they are subject to correcthat winter, and produced the tion and improvement by man largest crop of oats he ever raised; milked 15 cows and supplied his brother's betel in Roseburg the breakdown is not due to a with milk and butter. The range general shortage of currency, and was open to Looking Glass valindividual is not due to a general hardest this northwest coast has shortage of the circulating me- ever known, attended with great dium. We also agree that "the floods, wiped A. F. Brown about depression is due to a mai-distri- clean; took off the ferry boat and bution of gold among the nations smashed it on a tree down of the world, a lack of equilibri- stream, starved his dairy herd of um in the exchange of goods and about 45 animals, almost drownservices, an undue expansion of ed him twice, and left him strandcredit," And back of all of this ed financially. It did damage all disorder and confusion is the over the Pacific northwest that was felt for 20 years and more.

> In the summer of 1861 prospectors had found gold in the Nes Perce Indian country, in a place now called Oro Fine, Idaho, and late in the fall a party discovered the yellow metal at Florence, Idaho. There was a great gold rush to the Idaho mines in the spring

On March 22, Brown, with two companions, left Roseburg and joined the gold rush. They were 10 days getting to Portland; slept in barns along the way; found barns in Portland to sleep in. Shipped their outfit by beat from Portland; Brown got his Concord modity value. This value, howblame berangs, we imagine all ever, is not the value of money. The value of money is an intanseeking relief by placing the bur- gible value, (a spiritual value we might say) a legal tender value created by fiat. This applies to gold money and currency backed by gold or silver as truly as it does to flat paper money.

The people were afraid to accept the French assignats for fear the revolution would fail and this confiscated land be taken back. Too, these assignats did not represent a definite quantity of land. This, however, does not bear on the subject of money redeemable in service as was my proposal. True, the inflation of the present medium of exchange would be as great a failure as has been the offort to get more money into the hands of the consumer by loans. We might just as well say that the government cannot control the issuance of postage stamps as to say it cannot control the issuance of a full legal tender money based selely on a service redemptive system put into circulation without interest and without favor to any particular class. A legal tender of this kind would sutomatically have the whole wealth of the nation back of it. and would supply what is lacking in the present system of an unlimited coinage of a limited sup-

> O. F. FOWLER, R. No. 2, Box 10, Turner.

John Detering, farmer: "That sounds good; I hope it goes the Deschutes netted gem acclaimbuggy onto the steamboat at Portland, on top of a freight wagon, by persuading the captain with a cocked revolver that it would be unsafe for him to throw it off. After much hardship and many delays, Brown and his two companions, H. H. Wheeler, his cousin, and William R. Bishop, reached Walla Walla, Hearing that bacon was selling in the mines at $1.25 a pound, they for Lewiston. They packed from that town, buying more goods

After hardships the relation of which would fill a book, they arrived at Florence. Brown worked at mining at $10 a day while Bishop and Wheeler went back for more trading goods to pack in. The first $50 Brown earned with his wife in Roseburg, as she had Wheeler and Bishop got back with more trade goods, they sold solved, Brown remaining and the other two going on to a new gold discovery at Elk City, Idaho. Brown and another man got an outfit and tried prospecting, but gave it up, sold their outfit and dissolved partnership.

D. W. Stearns arrived that noon from Roseburg with a small pack train loaded with merchandise They immediately went into equal partnership, and they found a log building with shake roof and no glass for windows, bought it for $2500, and were in business that evening; firm name, Stearns & Brown. Stearns took the pack train and went back to Lewiston for more goods. Except for one trip, Stearns did the packing and Brown kept the store that summer. The one pack train could not keep the store in goods, and Brown bought another mule train, agreeing to pay $7000 for t, including the goods it had brought in; half payable the following morning and the other half a week later. Brown paid the man three days ahead of time, showing he had taken in $7000 in cash (or rather gold dust) in one week, in his one-man store.

The mining town of Florence was filled with the worst element on the coast, including thieves and gamblers from the east. Mon had a habit of getting drunk in the saloons and shooting into stores and tents as they went by. Brown slept on the floor in the store, with flour piled up around him to take the force of stray builets. A man was killed nearly every night. He took his meals at a restaurant and paid $8 a day for his food, consisting of bread, bacon, beans and dried apple (Turn to page 5)

Editorial Comment

From Other Papers POTATO WAR OVER

Well, friends, the Deschutes-Klamath potate controversy has come to an end. It was fun while it lasted and it aroused interest all over Oregon. The amount of advertising received for the netted gem grown in the Deschutes valley was extensive. Folks who had never been especially aware of the virtues of a good potate discovered that the American Legion regarded the Deschutes gem as the best spud produced in the state and they paid a premium or the Portland market to secure it for the home table. By newspaper was a good scrap while it

"The Challenge of Love" By Warwick

Dr. John Weife, old Dr. Montague Threadgold's vasistant, is stunned at the unsanitary conditions finds in the smug little town of Navegtock. Wolfe realizes his greatest fight in ridding the town of pollution will be in overcoming the resentful attitude of the people themselves who seem perfectly satisfied with their mode of living. He encounters his first obstacle in the person of Jasper Turrell, the brewer, who objects to Wolfe taking a sample of his well water for analysis. Undaunted by opposition, Wolfe continues his researches and prepares a map of the town's unsanitary areas. The one bright spot in Navestock is the home of Mrs. Mary Mascall where Wolfe is always sure of a welcome. When Mrs. Mascall is too ill to go to Flemyng Court to pay her dues of three dozen eggs to the Lord of the Manor, Wolfe offers to accompany her young daughter, Jess.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN Wolfe had been writing a pro scription. "And Bob had better take this, see no reason why I couldn't go agg hunting." "You! Oh, come along; what fun! I hat I'll find more eggs than you will. And Sally can get tea." They left Mary Mascall smiling m her chair. She was one of those women who could enjoy the playulness of life, even in the midst of an attack of asthma. Jess might ush out on one of her escapades. and her mother would laugh over and share in the girl's spirit. the recess below it being a favour- house very sedately. Mrs. Mascall had no particular lik- ite haunt of matronly-minded hens. mg for your Goody Two - Shoes Wolfe made a rush. A brown bird yng's Cross was held at nine o'. thild, who darned stockings, was fied in absurd terror, flustered clock, and at eight Joe Munday, fussily and piously sentimental, and round Wolfe's legs, and flew cack- the carter, dressed in a black coat played the sweet angel with bleat- ling over the gate. ngs of "dearest mamma." In the porch Wolfe picked up the egg basket. "Yes, you can carry it," said less.

He made her a grave bow. "Madam, your very humble ser-

Bob was sent to the stable with Wolfe's horse, and told to saddle corner, and pounced on an egg ly- under the cypresses, the fat pony and take the prescrip- ing amid the straw. tion and the note that Wolfe had written to Dr. Threadgold at Navestock. The serious man of eightand-twenty and the tall girl of sixteen plunged in among the outbuildings and stacks of Moor Farm that were jumbled together with the picturesque complexity that be- be very careful." ones to old towns, Great black loors let one into huge, cool in- like this-see!" seriors where sunlight erept in chrough chinks in the walls, and waste time." sparrows fluttered about the beams. pounds of freight when they left | where you might wade knee-deep | corners, and narrow ways Cattle sheds abounded, clean, white- a cart wheel as a ladder. washed loggies with sunlit yards rellow with straw. Jess made for the largest of the sattle sheds. "Come along." She did not unlatch the byre gate, but was over it with the flick of he skirt. Mrs. Mascall had abetted Jess in a wild revolt against crinelines. No girl walking in a species of tent could have trampled like Miss Jess." less Mascall over the yellow straw. As for climbing gates! Wolfe blessed mere Nature, and vaulted after self-consciousness.

"And you call yourself a man!" half. And there's the tea bell." She made for the long manger, gate with a flick of the skirt and Dr. Wolfe soon vaulted after her.

"Here-one, two, threehave a chance!"

"I was feeling sorry for that crook, or pole. Jess had gone to her

Wolfe made a dash for the far joined the white - smocked group

"I've got one, anyhow." She came up, laughing in his

"It's a chalk one!"

"Oh, confound it!"

They adventured into all manner there was a tapping at the window. There was the red-brick granary, of dim interiors, dark and musty a golden grain or be weighed on the stacks. Jess knew the idiosynthe sack-weighing machine in the crasies of all the Manor Farm hens. on either side of the stone-paved corner. There was the wagon shed, There was one that persisted in path. Wolfe stood back from them where the swallows built; the cake- laying her eggs on an old sheep- a little, and nearer the gate. He saw touse, a queer, dark, fragrant place skin that had been thrown into the porch door open, and Sally, the with its cake breaker ready to re- the tool loft in the wagon shed. maid, standing there, holding her fuce the brown slabs to fragments. Wolfe was made to scramble, using skirts back proudly to let her lady

> "Done, by Georgel Dusty knees and no egg!" "Poor Doctor Wolfe!" He looked down at her from

"I didn't mean you were poor "Just a touch of sympathy, eh?

You are a sweet young woman She laughed, and flushed momentarily with a touch of sudden

"Am I? It's nice of you to say that. We've got three dozen and a for the occasion, came round from the stable with the red-wheeled gig. "I say, wait a moment, let me The farm labourers had gathered under the great cypresses in front "Well, look then, don't stand of the house, each man carrying a lighted lantern, and a pitchfork, mother's room to dress, and Wolfe went out into the garden and "A fine night."

"It be." There was a sort of grumbling acquiescence, but the men did not appear interested in Wolfe or his opinions. As a body they stood and "And I've got six in my skirt. stared at the house, like boors in a Where's the basket? You'll have to strolling theatre, waiting for the curtain to go up. Wolfe had a feel-"Til walk like an old maid, Just ing that he made these men uncomfortable. He could see a light "Oh, you great silly! We mustn't in Mrs. Mascall's room. Presently a shadow came across the blind, and

"Listen to't."

The labourers ranged themselves pass. Jess come out, wearing a red cloak with the hood turned up, a green skirt, and green stockings, Resting against her bosom she carried the basket of eggs, decorated with red and green ribbons and with flowers. The men held up their fanterns, and louted to her with quaint grav-

"God keep thee, good Mistress."
"May the beasts be fat in your fields, and the bins packed full o'

"God's blessing on thee and the merry month o' May."

They walked back to the farm- Distributed by King Festures Syndicate & Ca.

lasted but the end has come. There | complete. In an effort to make it | tion and required that the mis is nothing more to argue about. appear that Klamath potatoes are branded spuds be removed from what they are not and to secure these sacks and offered under agent, anxious to make the best the better price paid for Dessale possible, has deflated the chutes gems two car loads of the Klamath balloon and by the same former were carefully placed in token placed the Deschutes potate on the top of the heap. The Klamath confession of income to light, was abject and thorities discovered the substitu- lover their loss .- Bend Bulletin.

'Deschutes Netted Gems' and

We need not dwell on the im plications of this story. Enough sacks bearing the magic words, has been said. We congratulate our' Klamath brethren on the shipped into the Portland market. spirit they have put into a losing feriority, which has only recently Needless to say the vigilant au- fight and commiserate with them

VICKS NEW ANTISEPTIC SAVES YOU HALF!

Big 10-oz. Bottle ... a 75¢ value ... only 35¢

Whole Nation Responds to Unusual Trial Offer

WE MAKE no extravagant claims for Vicks new antiseptic. Instead, we have supplied to druggists... at less than cost ... 5 million bottles in a special trial size ... so you can test its quality-and economy-in your

Each of these bottles contains 21/2 ounces . . . a usual 25¢ value. The price, while they last, is only 10st. Since this trial offer was announced 18 days ago, hundreds of thousands of people, in every section of the country, have taken advantage of it. Five million bottles shouldn't lest long among America's 26 mil-lion families. So get yours soon.

Best Vicks Could Produce VICKS Vicks Vocatone is simply the best oral antiseptic our chem-ANTISEPTIC

ists could produce. And they were aided by bacteriologists and pharmacologists of our 16 allied organizations ... in America, England, and Germany. They produced a balanced antiseptic . . . mild enough to be used day in and day out without risk to enough to do everything that any onal antiseptic can and should do. For All the Usual Uses You can use Vicks Antiseptic for all the customary uses...in your delicate membranes ... strong

And Vicks Antiseptic has this dilitional unique advantage ... born in a depression year, it is priced accordingly. Large 10-

usual 75-cont value

TRIAL SIZE ... ONLY 10# A 25¢ VALUE—AT YOUR DRUGGIST'S The supply of trial packages is limited. There are only 3 million for 26 million bomes. GET ONE WHILE THEY LAST!

一種一個語話

Daily Oral Hygiens,

Minor Cuts, Abrasions, Bits.

. MOUTH-WASH

. ANTISEPTIC LOTION

BARGLE

THE MAKERS OF VICKS VAPORUS