Farm Work Starts

Farmers have already taken advantage of the first few sunny days to get a larger yield of vetch for hay on land where the crop was killed by the hard freeze. Most of the wheat is not entirely destroyed but will make a very light crop and those who have seed wheat will replant the smaller fields to get a larger yield.

So far, the strawberry fields show no promise at all and growers assert that there will be no crop of fruit for harvesting in June. The loganberry vines seem to have withstood the cold better and training has already started in a small way.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rencneck and son Joseph, Jr., left by auto for California last week on their way back to the missionary field in India.

BIG BUSINESS FROM A CRAZE

A strange situation, if you think it out. People, in order to take their minds off the depression and kindred worries, have gone in for the jig-saw puzzle fad in a big way. Now it looks as if the fad has ended the depression for some people. Here is part of a New York factory where the puzzles are made where five hundred workers are kept busy turning out the teasers. Over a million puzzles are turned out here every week and the demand is steadily increasing, necessitating the employment of more help. Soon the depression will be vanquished by the jig-saw.
