Glee Bets Paid—The annual spectacle of ludicrously dressed students conducting themselves in various extraordinary manners started on the Willamette university campus yesterday as payment of Freshman Glee bets began. One young man, garbed in bright-colored beach pajamas, was expelled from a classroom with the order not to return dressed in that fashion. Several students contributed pennies and nickels to a young woman who was paying off a bet by carrying a "please help the dumb" sign in one of the halls. Men of the fourth-place junior class braved a dousing in the millrace after the chapel program which devoted to parodying the losing Glee songs.

Liability Not Assumed—City Attorney Chris J. Kowitz last night reported to the city council that in his opinion the city could not be held liable for injuries Mrs. R. G. Miller claims to have received as the result of stepping in a hole in the sidewalk at 450 North High street. She had filed a claim for $50 at the last February meeting. Kowitz held that under provisions of its charter the city cannot be held liable and that none of the employees in the respective city departments was cognizant of the defect in the sidewalk at time of the accident.

Business Slow—While business at the county clerk's office continues at a minimum because of the bank holidays, deputy clerks find plenty of routine matters to keep them busy. The first chattel lien filed in five days was accepted yesterday because filers urged that it be recorded. No other legal documents were filed. Scores of dog license applications that came in by mail before the deadline are nearly ready to send out, but there may be a question on whether they shall be mailed until checks can be cashed.

RELIEF WORK PLAN IN WORKING ORDER

18 Crews Being Organized Hiring Five to 40 men Each, Road Jobs

Machinery for starting men to work on various roads throughout Marion county was in working order yesterday, and men were being lined up, but whether any work was actually done had not been reported late in the afternoon. County Engineer Swart, in charge of allocation of work, said:

Eighteen crews of men are being organized, with all the way from five to 40 men on a crew. Swart did not know yesterday how many men had been signed up, as key men in the county had made no reports.

The program is being carried on under the relief funds borrowed by Marion county from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and is entailing county expenses only for wages of the key men. Work will be limited to widening, grubbing, digging ditches or other jobs where no outlay for labor is necessary.

With transfer of moneys stopped by the presidential bank proclamation, the question of when Marion county will receive the funds borrowed was paramount yesterday. The county court, however, was preparing to go ahead with its program.

Final details on administration of the R. F. C. funds were worked out yesterday at conference of the county court and other members of the county committee with Ivan White, field representative of the state relief commission.

The 18 road men named as key men for the relief jobs, which will be rotated, are:

O. D. Needham, Rosedale; Joseph Zuber, Sublimity; Theodore Fisher, Victor Point; C. C. Stayton, Stayton; Leonard Walker, Stayton; B. J. Bettencourt, Roberts; 2564

The opening address will be given by Rev. C. T. Carlson, who has been in the fields at Ecuador. Other speakers will be Rev. W. I. McGarvey of Seattle, district superintendent of the alliance, and John R. Turnbull, missionary field evangelist who made three expeditions into wild Arabia and who was honored for them by the Royal Geographical society of London.

Turnbull has an exceptional collection of colored slides with which he will illustrate his lectures on Arabia and what he found there.

The convention here and the annual local meet at Silverton is being carried on at the same time, with the same set of speakers interchanging, says the local pastor, Rev. W. H. Caldwell.

FICTION IS TOPIC AT W. U. LECTURE

Dr. Helen Pearce to Reveal Age of "Best Sellers"; Churchill to Play

The truth of the old epigram, "There's nothing new in the world," will be emphasized in literature tonight by Dr. Helen Pearce as she discusses in her lecture "A Very New Yet Very Old Best Seller," the recurrent use of the same basic stories and situations in the literature of succeeding generations. Miss Pearce will be the fifth of the Willamette university series of joint lecture-organ concerts to be given in the auditorium in Waller hall at 7:45.

Dr. Pearce has a reputation as a scholar in the field of comparative literature, having done considerable work in that field at the University of California where she attained the Ph.D. degree. Tracing the development of the Homerian story of Troy and the Trojans, Helen, Ulysses, Achilles and the other figures of legendary Greek history has been a particular hobby of Miss Pearce and will undoubtedly receive some attention Tuesday night.

The organ concert at 7:45 will present Frank E. Churchill, one of the best known organists in Oregon. Mr. Churchill has the happy faculty of combining the old masterpieces and the more modern popular numbers in a program and his program for Tuesday night is especially well-balanced.

Mr. Churchill is being assisted in a group of numbers by Miss Josephine Albert, popular young Salem contralto, whose reputation as an exceptionally promising young vocalist is spreading throughout the entire northwest. Miss Albert for one of her numbers has chosen Burleigh's arrangement of the "Deep River" spiritual.

FINANCIAL FLURRY OVER SOON, HOPE

Just another rainy day would characterize Monday in Salem, the second day of the tight closing of banks due to legal holidays. Business houses did a fair volume, especially those dealing in groceries, meats, etc. Stores many of them shut down on taking checks; but shoppers seemed to be well provided with currency to make the needed purchases. Credit stores of course continued sales on credit to their regular customers.

The universal expression was that the flurry would soon be over and that provision would be made so business could continue to carry on either limited withdrawals from banks or with some form of new circulating medium. Some places had run short of change, but when the banks arranged a place to provide change this difficulty was overcome.

M'MAHON - CARSON FEUD FLARES AGAIN

Conduct of Former Justice Of Peace Attacked at Committee Session

In a tense clash before the senate committee on revision of laws, the long standing McMahon vs. Carson, et al, feud flared up Monday morning, the battle being occasioned by a hearing on senate bill 351 which provides that senior judges in this district shall serve in the equity court and junior judges in the law court. If the bill becomes law, Judge McMahon will relinquish his present work to Judge Lowell and the former will take charge of the equity court.

Walter C. Winslow, local attorney, asked the committee to approve the bill holding Judge McMahon was incompetent to handle the law department of the court. John H. Carson, former district attorney, told the committee Judge McMahon had written a personal letter to the grand jury asking that body to indict James Smith, county commissioner, for alleged illegal acts in office.

The local jurist, white with anger, attacked the conduct of Brian Small, former justice of the peace here who was at the hearing declaring Small acted illegally while holding his job. McMahon also accused Carson of employing a stenographer at $50 a month out of funds not permitted for such purposes and when Carson sued Attorney Trindle, McMahon's candidate, was doing the same the judge said the practice of the new office holder did not justify Carson's action. McMahon told the committee the bill was purely a political matter.

Later Monday the revision of laws committee reported the bill out without recommendation, three members being said to favor it and three opposing it. The bill will probably be on the house calendar today.

MONEY BILLS ARE PASSED BY HOUSE

Passage of a brace of appropriation bills and approval of 39 senate bills, all of a special or minor nature, kept the lower assembly in session until a late hour Monday but provoked little debate. Roll call followed roll call in tedious monotony and at times attendance of house members was decimated by attendance of members at the senate debate which waged throughout the bulk of the afternoon on the Gouley bill for a state constitutional convention on the 18th amendment vote. The house held up Senator Byron's bill 269 for consideration today; killed by an unfavorable vote S. B. 8 and S. B. 146. It passed three appropriation bills with few dissenting votes, including a measure to give the state emergency board $150,000 for emergencies which may arise during the next biennium. The moneys revert to the general fund if not utilized.

Participation in World Court is Plea Made Here

Several thousand postal cards pledging support of Salem citizens to the Roosevelt administration in a program of adherence to the world court are to be sent east this week, under the leadership of a local committee for disarmament and improved foreign relations.

The movement here is being pushed by Dr. S. B. Laughlin of Willamette university, who Sunday saw that the blank cards were distributed through local churches. The messages going east ask the president to urge adherence to the world court "to fulfill the spirit of the Paris pact to which the United States senate pledged our nation on January 15, 1919." The movement to urge adherence to the court is nationwide, Laughlin said yesterday, peace lovers in all state cooperating to urge this action.

MEIER SIGNS BILLS

Governor Meier Monday signed a bill introduced by Senator Duncan authorizing an appropriation to pay the costs incident to a suit filed by the United States government against the state of Oregon, involving title to the beds and waters of Malheur, Mud and Harney lakes. Another bill signed by the governor abolishes the office of secretary of the state board of higher education. The office was held by Dr. E. B. Lindsay, who received a salary of $7500 a year.
