Smith in City — Newton D. Smith was in the city this week on business from Eugene where he manages the College Side Inn. He made the visit here during the spring vacation season at the University during which his shop is closed. Smith says business is very quiet in the Lane county city, due in considerable part to the reduction in the number of students in the university. Mr. and Mrs. Smith for a number of years managed the Gray Belle here.

COUNTY, STATE NOT AGREED, ROAD WORK

Marion county has not reached an agreement with the state highway department regarding the continuation of secondary road work in this county. County Judge Siegmund said yesterday. A conference is to be held at an early date to decide whether the county or the state does the work in 1933. Last year the county handled the work, the state providing the funds.

Under the new Oregon laws $450,000 annually is to be provided by the state for market road work. Yamhill county has already agreed to let the state handle all the work done there. Marion county officials, having the necessary road machinery, rather favor doing the secondary work here with the state providing the money.

The only secondary highway project of last year which has not been completed is the South Silver Creek Falls road.

ALENE PHILLIPS TO BE DEPUTY TO HOSS

Laughridge to Handle Huge Task of Re-Licensing Auto Operators

Alene Phillips, private secretary to Hal E. Hoss, will not act as chief deputy until October 1, during the leave of absence granted C. K. Laughridge, chief deputy for the past 10 years. It was announced Friday by Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state.

Laughridge has taken his leave of absence from duties in the general department and will devote his time until October 1 to work in connection with the motor vehicle division. He will concern himself principally with the activities of the operator's division, which faces one of the largest pieces of clerical work in the history of the state department when it commences the re-registration of all automobile drivers in the state in June.

"One gets some conception of the problem involved in carrying out the provisions of the new operator's law," said Secretary of State Hoss, "when we compare with what took place back in 1920. At that time the first driver's license law went into effect, and from July to December of that year the department issued 140,000 licenses, none of them requiring examination. This year we will be required to issue between 400,000 and 500,000 licenses between June and September, or over three times as many as in 1920 and in one-half the time. Thus our problem is six times greater than it was then, and is further added to greatly by the fact that thousands of those to be re-licensed will require examinations as to their ability to operate a car, their knowledge of the rules of the road, and as to their vision, hearing and physical condition so far as it might affect their ability to drive an automobile."

"At the same time that we are also issuing automobile licenses, and will run well into the fall months, at which time we will be preparing again to relicense automobiles, due to the change in the law which puts them back on the calendar year basis next January. Due to his long experience with the department, Mr. Laughridge is thoroughly qualified to handle the tremendous amount of detail work involved, which will leave me free to give my time to the functions of the main office and to the work of the board of control and other boards of which I am a member, and those activities are increasing steadily."

A number of other changes shifting employees and readjusting duties to conform to the new arrangement have also been made in the office, according to Mr. Hoss.

Clark Says Debt Scaling Prelude To Real Recovery
Much debt readjustment and scaling down with a realistic view taken of the potential earning power of such national institutions as the railroads is a prelude to real economic recovery, Colonel A. E. Clark of Portland observed here yesterday while in Salem on business.

The colonel, who has been prominent in Oregon politics, expressed himself as pleased with Roosevelt's initial steps although he said he thought his popularity was that which would have attended the advent of any new man in office. He predicted hard or slodding for the new president when his agricultural plans and railroad refinancing ideas were developed.

Painting on Silk Used in Displays At Miller Store
Original paintings in water colors on silk have been used effectively by Miller's store in making backgrounds for display windows. They were first shown during the formal opening Thursday night and have attracted much attention. The designs were planned by B. C. Lioullien, in charge of window displays at the store, and P. J. Rennings, local commercial artist, did the painting.

Solid color rayon in lighter tints of blue, apricot, etc., was selected. Patterns appropriate to spring were chosen: Lily pond with swans gambling lambs, etc., each panel having different treatment. Merchandise is then displayed against its appropriate background.

The Book into the crowd. A Yamhill county man, whose name the writer has not been able to find, caught it. Charley Parrish, son of Rev. J. L. Parrish, was second lieutenant of the Rifles, and present. L. E. Dyer, son of Connell Dyer of Salem, was first lieutenant, but was absent that day. The Rifles numbered 60 men, a fine organization. It was said that Hon. John W. Minto, a member of the Rifles, then a young man, fainted when the condemned men were swung off, and that there were such scenes in other parts of the cloud of witnesses of the grim business.

Yes; the writer knows where the Delaney house stood. It still stands. He knows also the spot of the hanging, not far from the north end of the bridge over South Mill creek. At least two members of the Marion Rifles who were present and served that day are still living. Some one has said in print, that was the first legal hanging in Oregon. That is a mistake. There were a number, not to mention truch law victims. There were at least two legal executions before in Salem, and only a long stone's throw distant from the spot where Beale and Baker were swung into eternity.

WILLIAMS ANSWERS FORCE ENTRY SUIT

O. A. Williams, through his attorneys, Bowe and Bergman, has filed answer to the forcible entry and detainer civil action filed in justice court by the Union Central Life insurance company. Williams claims that plaintiff entered agreement with him whereby he was to have possession of plaintiff's house for a year from November 1, 1932, in exchange for labor on buildings to be designated by plaintiff; and should labor exceed rental of $10 a month, defendant was to retain excess.

Considerable interest has been manifested in the case by groups from the unemployed workers' center here, and in an appearance in justice court chambers early this week a group of the unemployed intimated that "things would happen" if the defendant were dispossessed of the property.

CORVALLIS IS DRY AND WILL STAY SO

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, March 24. — Congressional action may mean legal beer to some people but it is merely a news report so far as changing the legal status of the dry situation on this campus and in the city of Corvallis is concerned. Investigation reveals the bona fide ordinance still intact in the city of Corvallis and the strict anti-liquor rule at the college showing no signs of weakening to permit any 3.3 per cent brew.

A bona fide ordinance, which in effect, a copy of the old Anderson state enforcement act, was enacted in this college town in 1916 and has stayed in force ever since. No move toward its alteration or repeal has been made, as both Corvallis and Benton county voted strongly against the state repeal last fall. This ordinance specifies one half of one per cent as the legal limit.

Benton county, in fact, has been a prohibition stronghold ever since saloons were banished by means of local option in 1904. The vote at that time followed public indignation over the slaying of the sheriff by an intoxicated 18-year-old youth who has been sold liquor by one of the nine saloons then operating. County prohibition was reaffirmed two years later and continued till the state went dry in 1916.

SANTIAM WORK MAY START IN 2 MONTHS

Work on the North Santiam highway running south from Whitewater creek through the eastern part of Linn county, will not be begun for one to two months, depending on weather conditions. Judge John Siegmund opined yesterday. He said there was still considerable snow in the territory.

The federal government has let contracts for 8.5 miles of grading south from the Marion county line and work will be begun just as soon as possible this spring. Eight miles of clearing work have been let north from the junction of the North and South Santiam to a d. s. Employment of 25 men there by the contractor who secured the job, awaits better weather. Marion county is matching federal funds in constructing the road.

AD CLUB GROWS IN SCOPE OF SERVICE

The Salem Ad club lived its history over again at its luncheon hour yesterday noon when past presidents presented the program. Former presidents include E. A. Brown, Stanley Keith, William Paulus, Sheldon F. Sackett, Gardner Knapp. All were present except Paulus.

Former presidents were called upon for five-minute talks, Gardner Knapp discussing direct mail advertising, E. A. Brown advertising in newspapers, Sheldon F. Sackett, the history of topography and Mr. Keith the use of a store trade paper over a 15-year period.

Keith said the local Ad club, originally organized to prevent false advertising, had grown in scope with the years and the progress of energetic leaders in the president's chair.

FAIR TRADE BILLS DISCUSSED MONDAY

O. F. Tata, secretary of the Oregon Merchants Retail association, will speak at the Monday noon luncheon of the chamber of commerce, telling what the fair trade bill and the fake sales bills, passed by the legislature, mean to the public.

The fake sales bill specifies what can be or can not be done in selling or advertising, such as: Definition of a fake sale; selling in limited quantities; substituting different brands; prohibiting fractional-cent prices.

The fair trade act provides protection to trade mark owners, uniform prices to be quoted by producers, how to close out damaged or soiled merchandise of contract goods, and how to advertise these goods.

In view of the nature of the discussion, an unusually large crowd of merchants is anticipated.
