CURTAINMENT SEEN AS FARMER'S NEED

Gehlhar Says Panaceas are Broken Down; Foresees Short Crop in Fall

Agriculture must realize that its hope for revival cannot lie in the production of more crops than the nation can absorb. People want more things of all descriptions but the amount of food they can consume has a definite limit. Feed acreage must be definitely curtailed and surplus production not encouraged. Such was the judgment of Max Gehlhar, in charge of the department of agriculture at the capitol, expressed in a luncheon talk to the Salem Kiwanis club yesterday.

Gehlhar outlined the panaceas held out for agriculture and showed how each one had broken down. He included greater production of crops, cooperative marketing, larger units of production, a stabilization corporation and additional and refinancing loans. All these methods of farm help had some good points, Gehlhar declared, but none could solve the vast problem before farmers.

The plight of agriculture was shown by Gehlhar through a series of statistics. Twenty per cent of farm income in 1919 went for taxes and interest, he said; in prosperous 1929 this item had risen to 40 per cent and is now much higher. In January, 1933, the farmer received 52 per cent of pre-war prices for his products, he averred; he still had to pay 105 per cent of pre-war prices for the things he purchased.

Too much spread exists between producers' receipts and consumers' costs, Gehlhar declared. He spoke favorably of the domestic allotment plan. Gehlhar said he estimated that 85 per cent of all winter sown crops in Oregon had been frozen out. He predicted a short crop this fall due to a late spring and lack of time for spring-sown crops to mature.

SOUTHERN FARMERS FOUND OPTIMISTIC

Farmers in Texas and Oklahoma are in as good shape as in the Willamette valley, and business men, bankers and farmers are all optimistic over prospects, reports J. G. Jackson, employe of the Oregon Electric here, who returned yesterday morning from a six-weeks trip through those two states. Mrs. Jackson accompanied him.

While in Mangum, Okla., Mr. Jackson made a trip through a large oil mill there, where he viewed the complete process in production of cotton seed products. The mill was running a full schedule on 24-hour basis at that time, though it doing less work now as cotton seed supply is low.

Mr. Jackson brought back with him small packets showing the entire process from seed to manufacture of cotton seed oil, which packets he has left at The Statesman office, where anyone interested may view them.

En route home, they stopped for two days at Colton, Calif., 60 miles east of Los Angeles, where they visited the orange orchards; and Sunday they were in Los Angeles. In the latter place they experienced one slight earthquake shock.

Sheep Dying for Want of Feed in Marion Vicinity

Sheep and lambs are dying in many numbers on the farms in the section between Marion and Salem. Mrs. Warren Gray of the Marion community said yesterday while in town. Some loss of cattle and other livestock due to lack of feed is also reported.

FUNERAL IS HELD FOR JOHN BRADY

BLACKFOOT, Idaho, March 28.—(AP)—Funeral services for John L. Brady, editor and co-publisher of the Blackfoot Daily Bulletin, were held in the Jason Lee Methodist church here this afternoon. The chapel was filled to capacity.

The Rev. N. H. Lines, who officiated, spoke from the text "I have fought the good fight," and recalled the struggle which Mr. Brady made for the things which he believed and felt to be right. Mr. Lines related his work in the Kansas legislature where he drew up the juvenile court bill for that state, his 25 years as a Sunday school teacher and his general activity in behalf of the church.

Mr. Brady was prominent in Kansas newspaper and political circles for years and before coming to Idaho was managing editor of the Salem, Oregon, Statesman. He died in Pocatello Sunday night of a heart attack.

Newspaper publishers and other prominent Idaho citizens were among the pallbearers. Mr. Brady's body was started tonight on its return to Kansas, accompanied by Mrs. Brady. Burial will be in Salina.
