Inside Rebuilding is Under Way; Many Permits Issued This Week

Rebuilding of the inside of the Breyman-White buildings at Court and Commercial streets was fully underway yesterday and completion of the task was expected within 60 days, Breyman Boise, who is superintending the work, reported. He said the inner structure, destroyed by fire in March 1932, would be rebuilt and finishing work carried as far as possible, pending tenancy. Some 20 men were at work on the heating system, plumbing, electric wiring and carpentering. Apparently encouraged by the open weather prevailing till yesterday, building owners all over the city were taking out permits for repair work and construction has been started on one house and two private garages. The 15 permits issued this week have a total value of $2715.

Four of the latest permits taken out are: By Carrie Chase to alter a dwelling at 639 Center, $450; Frank Whittemore, alter dwelling at 369 South 24th, $75; R. Schwabauer, repair dwelling at 1675 South High, $275; Emma Weller, erect garage at 665 North Liberty, $175.

A permit was issued earlier to Emery Debut for erecting a house at 1145 Rural avenue costing $1300. F. D. Martin is the builder.

STATE SEEKS $2755 TAX, MORLEY ESTATE

Case of the State of Oregon against the estate of Gerome Morley, deceased, was heard before Judge John Siegmund, and the court later took the matter under advisement for a later decision.

The state seeks to collect $2755 in inheritance tax from the estate which amounted to $22,923. T. M. Hicks, as administrator, resists the claim on the ground that the entire estate went to the Silverton hospital which is run without profit as a service institution and thus need not pay inheritance taxes on a bequest.

The Morley estate was largely in Liberty bonds, almost all of which have either been sold or turned over to the hospital. A sum of $9000 was set aside pending the court decision on the inheritance tax matter.

EXPECTS TO REDEEM WARRANTS BY JULY

The state of Oregon probably will redeem all of its warrants issued "not paid for want of funds" by July 1, Fred Paulus, deputy state treasurer, announced this week.

Paulus declared receipts from the personal income, corporation excise and intangibles treasury division at $1,500,000 and that the state's outstanding obligations would be wiped out as fast as possible. In addition to receipts from these taxes the state treasurer will receive in excess of $700,000 from the state insurance commission and $1,544,600 of $700,000 borrowed from the state bonus commission, and $181,544.60 of $700,000 borrowed from the state bonus commission. No part of $1,024,000 borrowed from Portland banks has been paid.

Other payments on the state highway commission obligation will be made as fast as revenues are received at the treasury department. As soon as this loan is paid off funds will be applied on the remainder of the obligation due the World War veterans state aid commission.

Outstanding warrants now total in excess of $700,000.

NEW STEAM SUPPLY PUT IN BY LAUNDRY

Salem Laundry company, 263 South High street, will operate its own steam supply within a few weeks. E. L. Wieder announced yesterday. Work was under way yesterday preliminary to erecting the 60-foot smokestack which will provide the draft for the automatic oil burner with which the big 80-horsepower boiler, now set up, will be fired. An 800-gallon underground fuel tank has just been installed.

The boiler is being installed as an economy move, according to Mr. Wieder. It will be housed in a fully fire-proof brick structure, so that insurance rates in that block will not be affected.

In the past the laundry has been supplied with steam from the Portland Electric company's power plant.

PLAN FOR TERMINAL OUTLINED BY ELLIS

Present River Tonnage Held Sufficient to pay for Cost of Project

Plans for a $95,000 terminal dock and warehouse in Salem were discussed yesterday before the Salem Ad club by William P. Ellis, who has been active in bringing the project to tangible form here. Ellis reported that application for a loan from the R. F. C. for the project would need now to be held up for approval of the council, since consulting engineers had agreed $95,000 instead of $75,000 should be sought in order to build a more substantial dock.

Ellis said the project would pay out on the basis of the 50,000 annual tonnage of incoming and outgoing river freight now handled in Salem. He said there was likelihood that much more river traffic would be developed with such a terminal built and declared it would be of aid in urging federal canalization of the river.

Ellis said the city council had nothing to lose but the strip of land along the river front from Court to Chemeketa streets, whereas at the end of 25 years it stood to have title to the dock.

The R. F. C. loan would be secured by the land, the building and a 25-year lease of the Salem Navigation company.

Chemeketans to Hike on Sunday To Silver Creek

Silver Creek falls will be the destination of a party from the Chemeketa hiking club of Salem tomorrow, under the leadership of August Nordurt. The hikers will leave the Jenny Lind confectonary here at 8:30 a. m. by automobile, park at North falls, probably meet a group of Portland Mazamas, and set out on the four-mile hike around the various falls at 10 o'clock. Trail fee will be 10 cents and transportation 50 cents.

South, East Are After Hop Roots; No Extras Here

Some eastern and southern inquiries for hop roots have been received by growers in this section, without avail. Probably all the hop roots available in Oregon will stay in the state.

One inquiry came from Florida, and former hop growers in Oneida and Madison counties, New York, have been in correspondence with Oregon and coast growers to secure hop roots.

This section of New York, once a large hop district, is going back into the business with advent of legalized beer, and word is that that district has been in contact with growers in Germany, England and on the coast here, in an effort to get sufficient roots.
