OREGON CITIES GET FAIR BEER REVENUE

By the Associated Press

The treasuries of Oregon municipalities have been noticeably enhanced by the "comeback" of the beaded beverage, now known as "three point two." The only obstacle to an uninterrupted and, from indications, swift flow of the beer in this state is-the beer itself.

Oregon's only two breweries, at Portland and at Pendleton, hardly anticipating that the legalization of beer would be effected so soon, the Civic Male chorus and the could offer a total of only $4,000 pints of 3.2 when the "grand opening" was staged April 7. Tax Taking Form

Governor Meier was in Salem only one day during the week, spending some of the remainder of the week at his Portland office. He was greatly disturbed by the sudden death of Accident Commissioner Early who had been a close friend of the executive. An appointment to the commission of a successor to Early is expected this week.

The sales tax campaign is developing. The labor-grange forces have joined hands, with Grange Master Gill on the stump a bit more often than Labor Leader O3born. Gill is making the tax a holy crusade and plans to speak against it in every county. Frank Lonergan is active for the proponent group as is Estes Snedecor. another house member who worked for the bill in the '33 session. The fate of the sales tax is partly dependent on real property tax collection by May 5. If the coulties find taxes collected in small percentage and cash depleted by the state's demands for money, county courts throughout the state may become ardent sales tax advocates.
